

2000 ANNUAL REPORT

ABOUT THE FOUNDATION

The Rockefeller Foundation is a knowledge-based, global foundation with a commitment to enrich and sustain the lives and livelihoods of poor and excluded people throughout the world.

In order to maximize its resources and leverage the Foundation's strengths, grantmaking is organized around four thematic lines of work: Creativity & Culture, Food Security, Health Equity and Working Communities. A cross-theme of Global Inclusion supports, promotes and supplements the work of these themes.

In addition, the Foundation supports a number of programs that are developing or in transition, among them the Africa Regional Program, Communication for Social Change, Public/Private Partnerships and Global Philanthropy.

One year into the execution of a new strategic direction that is more pointedly focused on the needs of the poor, we have reaffirmed some of our original assumptions about development, most notably that:

- For the Foundation's strategies to be most effective, the poor and excluded should have a voice in the process, that we should actively find ways to unleash those voices, and that such voices should be heeded; that
- The poor and excluded themselves should participate in researching, planning and doing the work, and that
- Neither this foundation, nor any other, can work alone. We must seek creative ways to leverage our limited dollars in order to attract new funding from the private sector, international aid organizations and national, state and provincial governments.

Even though the Rockefeller Foundation's endowment still ranks in size among the top 20 U.S.-based foundations, we cannot begin to solve any single world problem alone. The problems are too complex. A $15 million grant, or even a $50 million grant, cannot begin to address a cure for AIDS or development of new tuberculosis drugs, for example. Consequently, the Foundation increasingly must build partnerships and encourage collaboration between the public and private sectors. Following are more specifics on the Foundation's themes, cross-theme and special programs, with summaries of progress to date.

MISSION AND VISION

Traditionally, annual reports are an opportunity to look back and describe our achievements over the 12 months. As I sit at the desk I've now occupied for almost three years, I'm struck once again at how daunting a task this is because of the very nature of how foundations work. We seek long-term, systemic, enduring change, and accomplishing that takes time--far longer than just one year.

In the essay and photographs that follow, we take you to four countries, looking at common threads that stretch from continent to continent. You will see close up the effects of inequity on poor families and individuals, along with some explanation of the Rockefeller Foundation-supported programs that are working to alleviate those conditions, over time. Although the locales differ, the impact of inequity is strikingly similar as we travel from Irlanda's village in Mexico to Jackie's public-housing complex in the United States, then on to Margaret's farm in Kenya and Hian Som's plot in Cambodia. These are the real-life struggles of impoverished people whose lives are being bypassed--or even adversely affected--by the globalization that holds such great promise for those already better off.

In addition, I'd like to tell you about some of the new work begun in the past two years that illustrates the Foundation's endeavors to find lasting solutions to some of the world's most pressing issues. The first is our Africa Regional Office's support of Makerere University in Uganda, where our goal is to contribute to Uganda's distinctive governmental reform process, while simultaneously enhancing the quality and relevance of higher education by reinforcing the university's own transformation.

Secondly, we recently helped inaugurate the Global Alliance for TB Drug Development to find new drugs to treat one of the world's deadliest infectious diseases.

Drawing on our deep roots in Africa, where the Foundation began making significant investments in 1958, we have joined with the Carnegie Corporation of New York, the Ford Foundation and the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation in an initiative to support the improvement of higher-education institutions in a number of sub-Saharan countries.

Africa's universities have a key role to play in helping to reduce poverty and in serving as catalysts for national economic development and social well-being, but they all have suffered in recent decades from lack of funds and the inability to compete for the best faculty. Yet, despite very difficult circumstances, many of them are responding in creative ways to the needs of their countries and to the various democratic and social reforms now under way. And, we believe, the ultimate success of those reforms depends substantially on the universities' ability to support them.

We have elected to concentrate our efforts on Makerere, which, under visionary leadership, is undergoing dramatic changes and wishes to be more relevant to the needs of the Ugandan people. Once among the continent's premier universities, Makerere has embarked on an ambitious strategic plan that encompasses not only improvements to its own functions and finances, but also capacity building to aid the devolution of power from Uganda's central government to the districts. In the last six years, enrollment at Makerere has more than doubled and degree programs have expanded to include business administration, nursing, biomedical technology and tourism.

By building the university's research capabilities and providing the resources to attract top scholars, both to study and to teach, we believe those individuals, in turn, can become resources for the Ugandan government as it moves forward with its national decentralization agenda. The university will then be able to train not only national leaders, but also district leaders, most of whom lack higher education and formal training for their positions, in the areas of health, agriculture, finance, education, planning and public administration. In this way, we work together, in a collaborative public/private philanthropic effort, to build a strong civil society that can move the country forward.

The Rockefeller Foundation is also working to alleviate health inequities among poor people in developing countries. This is nothing new; we've pursued scientific approaches to world health throughout our history, with some well-known resulting accomplishments, including our support of research leading to the discovery of penicillin and development of the yellow fever vaccine, for which a Foundation staff member won a Nobel Prize. Today, we operate as a catalyst and partner among the myriad public, private and nongovernmental organizations engaged in health-equity work.

We know, from experience, that some of the world's most significant health problems exist simply because people in developing nations lack access to the kinds of treatments available in developed countries. Tuberculosis, for example, though still around in the United States, is not considered a public health threat because people have access to drugs that will cure it.

Such is not the case in the developing world, where TB is commonplace and kills more than two million people annually. One third of the world's population is currently infected with TB, and each year eight million people develop the disease in its active form. The standard treatment is a six to eight month regimen. However, when a patient must walk miles to the nearest public clinic, or the clinic is open only on Wednesdays, this effectively constitutes no treatment at all, because people simply cannot follow through for the required time. Meanwhile, the bacillus continues to build up resistance to existing medicines, and no new class of TB drugs has been developed in more than 30 years.

We considered what would be the ideal situation: a new TB drug that didn't require a lengthy treatment plan. The primary obstacle to its development: money. It costs an estimated $300 million, on average, for a pharmaceutical company to develop and take a new drug to market--but when the only market for that drug is poor people who can't afford it, there is no financial incentive to induce that investment.

To remove that obstacle, we brought together the Global Alliance for TB Drug Development. A public/private partnership, the Alliance operates independently and is modeled after a small, virtual R&D company. Using Foundation money for initial research costs, pharmaceutical companies have agreed to make the new drugs, once developed, available at cost to poor people in developing nations in return for guarantees from the ministries of health in those countries that they will purchase a certain number of doses.

All of this came about in a record 14 months; perhaps equally remarkable, with our initial $15 million commitment, together with $25 million from the Gates Foundation, the Rockefeller Foundation leveraged commitments totaling $150 million. We were able to do that because, when a foundation comes into the game, we kindle interest, add credibility, eliminate initial risk and stick with it for the long haul.

That is how we use our catalytic power to effect long-term, systemic change. That is how, over time, we will help to improve food production, access to jobs, education and health among the world's poor and excluded.

That is how we will contribute to the development of effective civil societies in Africa, and how we will promote the development of the first new TB drug by 2010.

We do not treat symptoms; rather, we go into things for the long haul, for that is the most effective, sustainable way to alter the root causes of the world's complex ills.

FINANCIAL REPORT

The Rockefeller Foundation's endowment was $3.5 billion at year-end 2000. The portfolio returned - 0.4 percent in 2000, while investment returns for the past five years have averaged 13.9 percent per year.

During the year 2000, the endowment provided for grantmaking and related expenditures of $197 million.

Since inception, the Foundation's grantmaking has totaled more than $11 billion in 2000 dollars. The chart below summarizes the Foundation's spending history for the last 12 years.

Created in 1913, the Rockefeller Foundation was endowed in several installments that totaled about $250 million. The graph below shows that the real value of the endowment in 2000 dollars has undergone periods of growth and erosion.

During the 1960s and 1970s, many endowments, including the Rockefeller Foundation's, experienced substantial declines in real value as a result of high inflation and low investment returns. Those trends were reversed in the 1980s and 1990s. The value in 2000 dollars of the original endowment, fully funded in 1929, was $2.5 billion, and it peaked at $4.6 billion in 1964.

The year 2000 will be remembered by both institutional and individual investors as the time when prices of technology stocks reached a peak and then swiftly collapsed, when value investing returned to favor, and when the principle of diversification once again held meaning for investors. By the end of 1999, the five-year unprecedented performance of the U.S. equity market, and technology stocks in particular, had caused even seasoned investors to wonder if the long-held belief in the benefits of diversification across a broad spectrum of asset classes and securities was still valid. During 2000, diversification again paid off as the equity market broadened significantly and the high-quality bond sector was a top performer.

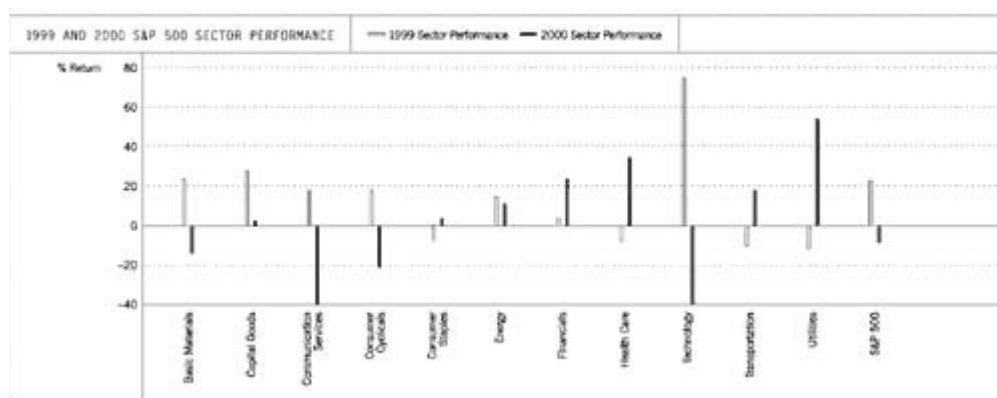

Beginning in the second quarter of 2000, value investing significantly outpaced growth as the NASDAQ index declined 51 percent from its March peak. The dramatic shift from 1999 to 2000 is illustrated by a comparison of the Russell 3000 Value and Growth indices for the two years.

Russell 3000 Value	6.7	8.1
Russell 3000 Growth	33.8	-22.4

The shift in leadership in the U.S. equity market during 2000 was broadly based, as several sectors took over leadership from technology and communications shares. As shown in the following chart, which compares sector performance in 1999 with 2000, the financial, health care and utilities sectors generated strong returns in 2000.

The U.S. fixed income markets, especially Treasury securities, provided strong performance during 2000, and the Salomon BIG bond index returned 11.6 percent for the year. In contrast to Treasury bonds, however, yield spreads on lower-quality fixed income securities widened to extraordinary levels during the year in response to fears of economic weakness. High-yield bonds underperformed by a wide margin as default rates increased.

Slowing economic growth and high oil prices negatively impacted international equity markets. Declines in the U.S. technology sector had a particularly severe impact on emerging markets. For the year 2000, the EAFE index of developed market securities declined 14.2 percent, and the index of emerging markets declined 30.6 percent. In addition, foreign currencies declined versus the U.S. dollar, especially the euro, which fell 18 percent through October but recovered in November and December to a 6 percent decline for the year.

In providing oversight of the endowment, the key financial objectives of the Foundation's board of trustees are (1) maintaining the long-term purchasing power of the endowment, after inflation and grantmaking, and (2) maximizing funds available for current program needs and administrative support. These conflicting goals are balanced through policies on the spending rate and on the asset allocation of the investment portfolio. The Foundation's long-term target for annual spending is 5.5 percent of the market value of the endowment.

Asset allocation policy is reviewed annually by the Finance Committee, which establishes a target allocation for each asset class. The Foundation rebalances to policy targets as markets move, but does not make frequent tactical shifts in asset allocation. The long-term asset allocation targets are:

Asset Class	Percent
U.S. Equity	35
International Equity	22
Bonds	22
Real Estate	10
Private Equity	10
Cash Reserve	1

The Foundation's investments staff develops overall strategy, recommends investment managers and oversees their performance and adherence to guidelines, researches new investment opportunities and determines their feasibility for the Foundation, and monitors and controls portfolio risks. A few fundamental principles underlie the investment program. Asset allocation is an important focus for the trustees and the investment staff. Diversification is essential to portfolio design, but new approaches are added only if they are fully understood, serve a clear purpose and can be implemented in meaningful quantities.

In selecting outside managers, we seek firms that, in addition to strong track records, have the people, management structure and disciplined processes to generate superior future results. While quantitative tools are essential for organizing data and for portfolio analysis, we believe that fundamental research and judgment always will be necessary in a world of rapidly changing capital markets. We recognize that investment expenses have a substantial impact on long-term results, and we consider cost control an important component of effective portfolio oversight.

The U.S. equity portfolio currently has approximately 30 percent invested in an S&P 500 index fund, and the remainder is allocated among nine active managers. This asset class is benchmarked against the Russell 3000 index and is designed to roughly approximate index allocations to small-, medium- and large-capitalization stocks.

The U.S. bond portfolio is managed by five advisers. In addition to U.S. Treasury and agency securities, the portfolio includes mortgages, corporate bonds, asset-backed securities, high-yield bonds and international bonds with managers who have expertise in these areas.

The Foundation's international equity portfolio has a small index fund component, which is maintained for purposes of portfolio rebalancing, plus six active managers. Currency risk is hedged at a 50 percent level by specialist managers, who manage only currency positions and do not select the underlying equity securities. Emerging markets can represent up to 20 percent of the total international equities portfolio, and the Foundation has two managers who specialize in these markets.

In addition to marketable securities, the Foundation makes investments in private equity and real estate through funds run by experienced teams in these sectors. The inefficiency of private markets offers long-term institutional investors, who can tolerate illiquidity, the opportunity to benefit from value added by experienced principals in selecting, structuring and managing investments. Our strategy is to build relationships with top-tier firms with whom we can invest in a series of funds over time and to structure partnerships that align our interests with those of our partners.

INFORMATION FOR APPLICANTS

Contacting The Foundation About Grants

The Rockefeller Foundation works to enrich and sustain the lives and livelihoods of the poor and excluded throughout the world.

The Foundation has identified four themes, or subject areas of work—Creativity & Culture, Food Security, Health Equity, and Working Communities. A cross-theme of Global Inclusion supports, promotes and supplements the work of the four themes. In addition, the Foundation funds a number of programs that are new or exploratory in nature. Foundation programming is managed from the Foundation's New York City headquarters, and from regional offices in Bangkok, Thailand; Nairobi, Kenya; Harare, Zimbabwe; Mexico City; and San Francisco.

The Foundation is a proactive grantmaker—that is, the officers and staff seek out opportunities that will advance the Foundation's long-term goals, rather than reacting to unsolicited proposals. Foundation officers receive more than 12,000 proposals each year, 75 percent of which cannot be considered because their purposes fall outside the Foundation's program guidelines.

Organizations interested in Foundation grantmaking should send a letter of inquiry addressed to the director of the subject area of interest, Rockefeller Foundation, 420 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10018, or, inquiries can be sent online as follows: Creativity & Culture—creativity@rockfound.org, Food Security—food@rockfound.org, Health Equity—health@rockfound.org, Working Communities—work@rockfound.org, or Global Inclusion—global@rockfound.org. An inquiry should briefly describe the project and its purpose (no attachments, please).

It is important to note that, as a matter of policy, the Foundation does not give or lend money for personal aid to individuals, support attempts to influence legislation, or, except in rare cases, provide general institutional support, fund endowments or contribute to building and operating funds.

PROGRAM OBJECTIVES

Theme: Creativity & Culture

Resilient and Creative Communities: Preserving and renewing cultural heritages to enhance the well-being of societies and equip the poor and excluded to relate to, and gain benefits from, the new global community.

Grantmaking is done through Recovering and Reinventing Cultures Through Museums, a competitive program supporting exhibitions that broaden the definition of American art and chart the cultural contributions of non-Western populations. Support is also given to ongoing research initiatives on the cultural indicators of social health. The Foundation's Partnerships Affirming Community Transformation (PACT) initiative annually accepts applications for its competitive program. PACT supports community partnerships that use the arts and humanities to bridge difference and effect social change.

Explorations are under way to preserve and strengthen threatened traditional art forms in developing countries; to help communities recover and interpret cultural materials, such as literary or religious texts and oral histories; and to examine the role that memory, history and imagination play in helping communities withstand and adapt to the stresses of poverty, exclusion and violence. These program explorations are not open to direct application.

Knowledge and Freedom in the Public Sphere: Artists and humanists, through social critique, play a key role in creating democratic, inclusive civil societies. Translating religious ideas into the language of public discourse and brokering conversations between religious communities can help defuse tensions that deeply touch people's lives.

Grantmaking is done through initiatives that fortify civil society through cultural institutions in Africa and the Muslim world, and mobilize the assets of religions to build resilient communities. Support for scholarship and research networks is provided through a competitive program of Resident Humanities Fellowships hosted by humanities centers in North and South America. Additional ways of bringing humanities perspectives to bear on the Foundation's new program themes are under exploration.

Creativity and Innovation in a Global Age: The voices and visions of artists and humanists can help us envision reality and clarify our understanding of ourselves and others. Such expression can be enhanced by experimentation with new technologies.

Grantmaking supports the creation of new work in the performing arts (dance, music and theater) through application to the Multi-Arts Production (MAP) fund. Support for independent media artists in the United States and Mexico working in documentary, video, dramatic narrative film and experimental digital design is provided through Film/Video/Multimedia fellowships awarded by nomination—not by direct application—and administered by National Video Resources.

Explorations are under way to create environments that encourage new media collaborations between the artistic and technological communities, and to engage humanists and social scientists to probe the meaning of the cultural expression and the new forms of social organization enabled by the Internet. These particular explorations are not open to direct application.

For inquiries or applications, contact: creativity@rockfound.org;
fax: (212) 852-8438.

Theme: Food Security

Enabling Farmer Participation: Improvements in the food security of poor farm families must be based on effective and sustainable methods for engaging them directly in the articulation of their needs, and in the analysis, design and implementation of agricultural innovations.

Grantmaking focuses on farmer participation in setting priorities for and in conducting plant breeding, developing seed production and distribution systems, and improving agronomic practices.

Applying Science and Technology: Key constraints to the food security of the rural poor in bypassed areas can be addressed effectively through coordinated partnerships of local scientists and farmers with cutting-edge biotechnologists, plant breeders, agroecologists and policy scientists.

Grantmaking focuses on accelerating the discovery, development and application of new genetic and agroecological strategies for enhancing yield stability, producing more resilient crops, improving human nutrition and preventing environmental degradation.

Strengthening Policies and Institutions: Appropriate training and institution building can strengthen local organizations to access and move the key policy, institutional and technological levers that lead to increased incomes and improved food security.

Grantmaking aims to foster national development of policies that support resilient and profitable smallholder agriculture, and strengthen institutions that integrate the scientific and participatory approaches to innovation development.

The work of the Food Security theme is global in scope, but will have special emphasis on sub-Saharan Africa and South and Southeast Asia. Training of national scientists from these regions can be included in research grants, and postdoctoral fellowships may be awarded to candidates nominated by grantee institutions.

For inquiries or applications, contact: food@rockfound.org;
fax: (212) 852-8442.

Theme: Health Equity

Harnessing the New Sciences: Advocacy, capacity building and support for specific product-development initiatives can effectively harness the new sciences to counter market failures on essential health products.

Grantmaking supports the acceleration of product development for neglected diseases afflicting the poor, including vaccines for children's diseases and for AIDS, and medicines for malaria and tuberculosis.

Support continues for reproductive-health technology-development projects already under way.

Resourcing Public Health: The generation, sharing and use of knowledge-based resources through partnership and cooperation can strengthen the capacity of local health systems to improve the health of the poor and to redress inequities.

Grantmaking supports activities that increase access to knowledge, develop human resources and promote excellence in research through partnership, cooperation and participation.

Strengthening Global Leadership: Redressing the disproportionate burden of emerging health threats upon the poor is contingent upon a robust new framework for health equity that is based upon new knowledge and on giving voice to the poor and excluded through dynamic leadership by individuals and institutions.

Grantmaking focuses on strengthening health-equity analysis, identifying best practices and tools for equitable health-sector reform, and promoting greater institutional responsiveness and accountability to the concerns of the poor in the context of new and emerging health problems.

The work of the Health Equity theme is global in focus, but has special emphasis on sub-Saharan Africa and South and Southeast Asia. Health Equity does not support fellowships or scholarships for higher education.

For inquiries contact: health@rockfound.org;
fax: (212) 852-8279.

Theme: Working Communities

Setting a More Equitable Public Agenda: Research, policy analysis and advocacy can promote a deliberate, informed and participatory public agenda to achieve more equitable outcomes.

Working Communities funds research on (1) the consequences of economic, technological and demographic trends on the structure of work, and their impact on the least skilled, through a request for proposal process sponsored with the Russell Sage Foundation, and (2) the structural components of racial and ethnic exclusion and their implications for democracy. Policy analysis and advocacy grantmaking is limited to long-standing grantees of the Foundation and projects that are invited to apply as part of Foundation initiatives to increase employment opportunities in specified states and cities.

Building Competent Organizations: Communities need strong, competent organizations to sustain and improve programs that provide lasting social benefits.

Grantmaking is made through national initiatives, such as the National Community Development Initiative, which supports community-development corporations, or by invitation to participate in city-specific initiatives to increase the scale and impact of reform in poor school districts, or directly to work-force development providers that serve very poor communities.

Testing Innovations: Practical, proven and cost-beneficial models, designed and implemented with the active participation of community residents, are needed to reduce educational inequities, increase employment opportunities and promote racial/ethnic inclusion.

Grantmaking supports well-designed and rigorously evaluated models to improve: (1) employment access and advancement opportunities, (2) the quality of education for poor and limited English-speaking children, and (3) innovative solutions that increase voice and participation of the poor and excluded as an antidote to racial and ethnic exclusion. Projects are funded by invitation only.

For inquiries, contact: work@rockfound.org;
fax: (212) 852-8273.

Cross-theme: Global Inclusion

Global Inclusion (GI) makes connections among the four themes, regional offices and special programs. This cross-theme tackles issues which connect the themes and their constituencies, and identifies ways to strengthen the linkages between them.

GI also concentrates on the linkages between global organizations and local communities, and on the individuals who experience directly such problems as water shortages or violent conflict.

GI's grantmaking is based on three related strategies to promote social change:

- Promoting and making widely available the best information, products and processes—scientific, technological and political—from all parts of the world to advance inclusion;
- Working to assure that the institutions, processes and events that set the rules of globalization are increasingly transparent, participatory and aimed at promoting public good as well as private wealth;
- Making the necessary links between the shared values, aspirations and worldviews of the powerless and the powerful, worldwide.

This cross-theme seeks to frame issues and focus public will and resources on critical world issues. Grantmaking is designed to encourage a more open and productive atmosphere in current global debates and to enhance the participation and voice of developing-country actors in policymaking.

GI makes grants according to the following lines of work:

1. Global dialogues on plant biotechnology
2. Intellectual-property rights
3. Trade and development
4. Cooperative engagement
5. Peace and security
6. Women at work
7. Leadership for the Environment and Development (LEAD)
8. Water
9. Environmental governance
10. Science as a public good
11. Sustainable development theory

Global Inclusion will review a short letter of inquiry describing the project for which funding is sought. Funds are limited and will be primarily directed by Foundation staff. Large institutional grants will not be considered. Global Inclusion does not support educational fellowships.

For inquiries contact: global@rockfound.org;
fax: (212) 852-8461.

Regional and Special Programs

AFRICA REGIONAL PROGRAM

Goal: To contribute to the renewal of the African continent by building the required human and institutional capacity by providing critical information that will promote effective policies and programs to improve the lives and livelihoods of the poor.

Grantmaking supports work in three areas.

Human Capacity Building: Africa has a dual challenge: providing access to universal primary education of a high quality to a young and growing population, and upgrading its higher education system so that its skilled sons and daughters can utilize sophisticated technology, and so that its scientists are among the inventors.

Grantmaking supports activities aimed at closing the gender gap in school access and achievement, and at reducing the waste of the school systems in countries where universal primary education is becoming a reality. We also support activities aimed at improving understanding of the challenges facing higher education in Africa and at helping universities become more relevant to the development of the continent.

Information For Development: Democratization and increased accountability of elected leaders is enhancing the local demand for information to support evidence-based decision making and evaluate development programs.

Grantmaking supports research that informs policy development, program design and resource allocation by providing local-level, multifaceted information on food, health, work and other human conditions that is needed to understand and address the root causes of poverty.

Partnerships for Africa's Renewal: Success of our efforts in food, health, culture and work requires more than education and capacity strengthening. It is particularly important to address the broader contextual and developmental issues that shape the contribution of the capacity that is being built.

Grantmaking in this area of work is purely exploratory and does not accommodate unsolicited proposals.

COMMUNICATION FOR SOCIAL CHANGE

Goal: To enhance the effectiveness of development initiatives focusing on the poor and excluded by fostering innovative communication approaches that engage, empower and engender positive social change.

CFSC supports projects in three areas:

- Researching, testing and applying new indicators and evaluation tools to measure the effectiveness of communication projects and programs. Grantmaking will focus on developing new methods for joint funding, and on analysis and dissemination of communication research that affects the work of the Foundation and its grantees.
- Testing and conducting trials of communication-for-social-change methodology on key social issues impacting the poor and excluded, especially in partnership with Rockefeller Foundation grantees. Grantmaking will focus on researching and testing the effectiveness of communication for social change in addressing critical issues faced by - poor communities, and on developing evaluation measures and methodologies that are less intimidating and more participatory.

- Creating new training models and means-of-knowledge transfer about how to apply communication-for-social-change methodology, particularly for Rockefeller Foundation grantees.

Grantmaking will focus on mobilizing resources to develop and strengthen the capacity of communication professionals in poor nations, including the encouragement of free and democratic media.

For inquiries contact: csc@rockfound.org;
fax: (212) 852-8441.

The Foundation also has special programs focusing on Public/Private Partnerships and Global Philanthropy.

THE PROGRAMS: CREATIVITY & CULTURE

Goal: To give full expression to the creative impulses of individuals and communities in order to enhance the well-being of societies and better equip them to interact in a globalized world.

Cultures are both resilient and fragile. The arts and humanities are the repository of tradition and memory, which help people to withstand the stresses of poverty, migration, violence and discrimination.

Globalization, propelled by new technologies, provides both opportunities and threats to creativity. Folk traditions can re-emerge and strengthen community morale, while new technologies and modes of communication create "imagined communities" that unite people across geographic boundaries through shared experiences. At the same time, globalization can lead to the homogenization of cultures and can undermine cultural diversity.

As it has for some 80 years, the Rockefeller Foundation bases its support for the arts and humanities on the belief that societies benefit from the free expression of creative individuals. Refocusing its strategy to address today's challenges of globalization, the Foundation aims to enhance the creativity of individuals and communities through the preservation and renewal of the cultural heritage of the poor and excluded, the engagement of artists and humanists in the creation of democratic and inclusive societies, and the support of diverse creative expression and experiments with the new digital technologies.

The Foundation supports the recovery and reinvention of cultures through such vehicles as museum exhibitions, preservation of traditional art forms, cultural heritage and folklife projects, and community-arts projects, as well as efforts to promote cultural policy and understand the cultural components of well-being. It promotes social critique and the free flow of ideas through humanities research, efforts to strengthen pluralism and institutions of public culture in Africa, Latin America and within Muslim communities, and the mobilization of religious assets in building civil society. In addition, the Foundation supports media and performing artists through fellowships, festivals and the creation/presentation of new work; it facilitates the interaction of the arts and new technologies; and it probes the meaning and impact of those technologies.

Although most of the Foundation's Creativity & Culture work is concentrated in the United States, initiatives in other countries include strengthening a network of African publishers and recovering and publishing literature by African women writers, resident fellowship programs for humanities scholars in Central and South America, explorations with museums in southern Africa and Mexico, reconstruction of traditional Cambodian court and folk dances at the Royal University of Fine Arts in Phnom Penh, and support for efforts to commemorate social trauma as democratization and social reconstruction proceed. Examples are humanities research focused on violence, democracy and authoritarianism at the cultural nongovernmental organization SUR in Peru and an international coalition of "historic sites of conscience" that include the Lower East Side Tenement Museum in New York, the Slave House in Senegal and the Project to Remember in Argentina.

THE PROGRAMS: FOOD SECURITY

Goal: To improve the food security of the rural poor through the generation of agricultural policies, institutions and innovations that will provide sustainable livelihoods in areas of sub-Saharan Africa, Asia and Latin America bypassed by the Green Revolution.

One of the great scientific success stories of the latter half of the 20th century, the Green Revolution helped many in Asia, Latin America and Africa achieve food security. The Foundation has engaged directly in agricultural work since 1934, when it embarked on a rural reconstruction program in China; its association with the Green Revolution commenced in 1943, with the inception of a program designed to increase food production in Mexico. In 1970, a Foundation staff member, Norman Borlaug, won the Nobel Peace Prize for his pivotal role in modernizing agriculture in the developing world.

In much of Asia and portions of Latin America, the introduction of improved crop varieties that respond well to fertilizer and irrigation has boosted food production and farming incomes considerably. However, large numbers of rural poor people remain in poverty; most of them farm where rainfall is low and variable, and where soils are poor in nutrients. More than 800 million people are chronically undernourished. Food for the urban poor depends upon jobs, income and low prices, while food for most of the world's 600 million rural poor depends upon their own labor and the productivity of their often limited or fragile land resources.

To help those farm families move out of poverty, Foundation grantees are generating agricultural innovations, including more dependable and sustainable farming practices, as well as new crop varieties developed for the specific environmental and socioeconomic conditions under which the poor farm. Our grantees are engaging farmers themselves as participants in scientific investigations and in the development of new technologies to meet their needs.

The ability of local organizations to access and move key institutional, policy and technological levers is critical to the success of this process. To foster development of local, national and international policies that will increase the productivity, stability and sustainability of smallholder agriculture, the Foundation seeks to empower and invigorate institutions which provide goods and services to poor farmers. In Africa, for example, the Foundation provides funding to build the capacity of African institutions and strengthen their commitment to serving smallholder farmers. The Agricultural Productivity and Food Security Task Force in Zimbabwe, the Maize Productivity Task Force in Malawi and the Sustainable Community Oriented Development Programme in Kenya are among the initiatives that are helping to achieve Foundation objectives.

THE PROGRAMS: HEALTH EQUITY

Goal: To advance global health equity by pursuing the reduction of avoidable and unfair differences in the health status of populations.

Although longevity gains in the last 40 years exceeded those of all of the past 4,000 years, humankind's extraordinary progress in health has not been equally distributed among or within countries. Genetic predisposition, crowded living conditions, environmental exposures, food insecurity and inadequate access to health care all contribute to disparities in health achievement.

Health-adjusted life expectancy in Japan exceeds 75 years, while in Sierra Leone it is about 25 years. People in the North can expect to live with HIV for 20 years or more, while in eastern and southern Africa, AIDS has precipitated a 20-year free fall in life expectancy. Within rich and poor countries alike poor women suffer markedly increased risks of death and disease compared to rich women.

Health-product market failures, crumbling health systems in the wake of health-care reform and a myriad looming health threats have combined to generate inequities in health that the Foundation is working to address by harnessing the new sciences, resourcing public health and strengthening global leadership.

The Rockefeller Foundation has pursued scientific approaches to world health throughout its history--from eradicating hookworm to modernizing medicine and public health. The Foundation's accomplishments are many, including support for research leading to the discovery of penicillin and of the yellow fever vaccine, for which a staff member won a Nobel Prize.

The Foundation's new Health Equity strategy seeks to counter health-product market failures with advocacy, capacity building and support for specific product initiatives. Much of this work is being done through public/private partnerships patterned after the Foundation created the International AIDS Vaccine Initiative. This year, for example, a new alliance for accelerating tuberculosis drug development was born.

The Foundation aims to revitalize public health systems to address the health priorities of poor and marginalized people and redress disparities, particularly in sub-Saharan Africa, and South and Southeast Asia. In the Mekong Delta area of Southeast Asia, for example, a new program is working to strengthen the capacity of health systems to identify and redress disparities in the infectious diseases by improving the collection and use of surveillance information. Recognizing the need for local ownership, policymaker buy-in and scientific validity, the concept of a "gauge" to monitor inequities in health and health care has emerged.

In Nairobi, Kenya, an urban slum equity gauge is calling policy attention to deplorable living conditions and unacceptably high child-mortality rates.

Finally, the Foundation has acknowledged the need to address looming health threats. This type of work includes a multicountry tobacco control effort under way in Southeast Asia.

THE PROGRAMS: WORKING COMMUNITIES

Goal: To transform poor urban neighborhoods into working communities--safe, healthy and effective neighborhoods--by increasing the amount and quality of employment, improving the quality of all urban schools, and increasing the influence and voice of the poor and excluded in political decisions that affect their lives.

Quality education, good jobs, and increased participation of the poor and excluded are the building blocks of successful working communities in urban neighborhoods and metropolitan regions. Such communities depend on and, in turn, foster the increased involvement of all residents, which, ultimately, creates and sustains a more equitable and just society.

In its quest to achieve greater social justice, the Foundation faces some daunting challenges in its home country:

- Despite sustained U.S. economic growth and the lowest unemployment rates in three decades, one in every eight persons remains in poverty, which belies the notion that economic growth alone ultimately will reduce poverty.
- Income inequality in the United States is the highest among all industrialized nations, due, in part, to the decline in real wages of low-skilled workers.
- Racial and ethnic minorities are poor in disproportionate numbers. While one in 10 white persons is poor, one of every four Latinos and African-Americans lives in poverty.
- Poverty is primarily an urban phenomenon; three fourths of the poor live in metropolitan areas, and central U.S. cities are home to half of the nation's poor.
- Poverty among racial minorities is heavily concentrated in poor urban neighborhoods. One in 20 whites lives in a poor neighborhood, compared with one fourth of African-Americans and one fifth of Latinos.
- Poverty in U.S. neighborhoods increasingly involves the foreign-born, with the rate among some of the most recent newcomers approaching 50 percent.

The Foundation supports three areas of activities to improve these conditions: public policies with explicit goals to eliminate or reduce inequities and disparities in education, employment and civic participation, especially among racial and ethnic groups; competent public and private organizations to implement and sustain such policies and the programs; and detailed practical knowledge and research about which programs work, which do not, and with what costs and benefits.

The Rockefeller Foundation's Working Communities strategy supports programs designed to:

- Increase neighborhood employment rates so that most households make a living from paid work and to ensure that work pays;
- Enhance the participation of the poor and excluded in designing and implementing sustainable solutions;
- Improve public schools in poor neighborhoods; and
- Strengthen democratic processes.

By forging partnerships with business and community providers, the Foundation believes it can make a difference in the employment of the urban poor and excluded. One such arrangement with a private developer, the Mills Corporation, involved the training and hiring of more than 850 people to work at a new mall in Nashville, Tennessee.

The Foundation is drawing to a close several long-term educational initiatives and will host, in the spring of 2001, a national symposium on lessons learned from philanthropic efforts in school reforms. It will also continue to address school improvement with support for teacher quality improvements, a new project, "Re-Visioning School Districts," which will examine the conditions and elements necessary for district-wide reform, and new research to increase public knowledge about alternative educational reforms, including school vouchers, charter schools and dual language instruction, among others. To increase the participation of racial and ethnic minorities in shaping solutions to inequality and exclusion, the Foundation supports collaboration among scholars, activists and community leaders that combine research and community interests; innovative legal practices that encourage community participation in addressing the problems of racial justice; and ideas that expand upon traditional racial-equity approaches, look at the structures of opportunity for everyone, and promote broad, deliberate and informed discourse to set remedies.

In conjunction with its Creativity & Culture work and with the help of its Mexico regional office, the Foundation also has begun to explore the transnational character of urban communities.

One of the core processes in the emergence of a new urban paradigm, transnational communities are reshaping the lives and livelihoods of the poor and excluded through the routine cross-border flow of people, money and ideas. Although the public debate has focused on how well new immigrants are adapting to U.S. communities, few observers or policymakers have focused on how U.S. institutions and communities are changing as a result of the large numbers of immigrants. Governments and civic organizations in the countries of origin also have not paid serious attention to the effects of these routine cross-border movements on families, households and communities at home. In the context of globalization, the Foundation is reviewing research, policies and the activities of civil society to learn more about how the everyday realities of the poor and excluded are becoming transnational and how poverty in U.S. communities is intermixed with and reinforced or overcome through connections abroad. The review also involves a search for innovative strategies that work across borders to improve the lives and livelihoods of the transnational poor and excluded.

THE PROGRAMS: GLOBAL INCLUSION

Goal: To help broaden the benefits and reduce the negative impacts of globalization on vulnerable communities, families and individuals around the world.

The cross-theme of Global Inclusion supports, promotes and supplements all four of the Foundation's thematic lines of work.

Globalization refers to the rapid and massive movement of capital, goods, people, ideas, institutions and images across the globe. Although this process has been occurring for centuries, its speed and scale have accelerated over the last 50 years.

To be "included" in the benefits of globalization and protected from the worst of its negative consequences, individuals, households and communities would have:

- Influence over the rules and systems that govern political, economic and cultural life;
- Participation in the prosperity that global economic change offers;
- Access to global information;
- Protection from such physical harm as violence, environmental pollution or disease epidemics; and
- The expectation that global systems promote peace and stability.

Under its Global Inclusion theme, the Foundation is pursuing both ongoing and new initiatives in an effort to have an impact on fast-moving, complex global policy processes. Current lines of work are:

- Global biotechnology dialogues
- Intellectual-property rights
- Trade and development
- Cooperative engagement
- Peace and security
- Women at work
- Leadership for the Environment and Development (LEAD)
- Water
- Environmental governance
- Science as a public good
- Sustainable development theory

Global Inclusion seeks to make connections among the Foundation's four themes. Working with Foundation staff, it uses the opportunities provided by these connections to invest in activities and people who can shape rules, norms and practices to promote the well-being of the poor and excluded globally. Global Inclusion tackles issues which connect the themes and their constituencies, and identifies ways to strengthen the linkages between them. Growing global interdependence and porous boundaries underscore that economic and social integration must be shaped to include such broadly defined aspirations as safety, dignity, freedom and economic security for all peoples. Specifically, the word "inclusion" refers to our efforts to include in global problem solving the Foundation's main constituency: the poor and excluded.

Global Inclusion grantmaking and other activities are based on three related strategies to promote social change:

- Promoting and making widely available the best information, products and processes--scientific, technological and political--from all parts of the world to advance inclusion;
- Working to assure that the institutions, processes and events that set the rules of globalization are increasingly transparent, participatory and aimed at promoting public good as well as private wealth;
- Making the necessary links between the shared values, aspirations and worldviews of the powerless and the powerful, worldwide.

Global Inclusion grantmaking supports activities in all three of these areas. However, all GI activities are based on the belief that, in both a moral and a practical sense, if globalization does not work for everyone, even the least among us, ultimately it will not work for our common future.

THE PROGRAMS: ASSETS & CAPACITIES

Bellagio

Since its opening in 1959, the Bellagio Study and Conference Center, located on Lake Como in northern Italy, has hosted more than 3,300 resident scholars, artists, writers, scientists and policymakers, and accommodated 20,000 workshop and team participants. Each year, about 140 residents and 50 workshops and teams are hosted--each selected as part of a competitive application process.

Persons invited to Bellagio are considered for short-term workshops, team residencies or individual longer-term stays for the purpose of study, writing or artistic creation.

Individual, collaborative and parallel residencies

The Center offers one-month stays for 15 residents at a time. Individuals in any discipline or field and coming from any country who expect their work to result in publication, exhibition, performance or other concrete product are welcome to apply for a period of work uninterrupted by the usual professional and personal demands.

Workshops and teams

The Foundation seeks applicants of achievement and promise who are addressing significant issues, tackling substantial scholarly problems or attempting to go beyond artistic boundaries. Emphasis is given to diversity in geography (developing-country applicants are especially encouraged to apply). Workshops and teams range in size from three to 25 participants.

Communication for Social Change

Goal: To enhance the effectiveness of development initiatives focusing on the poor and excluded by fostering innovative communication approaches that engage, empower and engender positive social change.

Virtually all of the Foundation's work relies heavily upon the ability to "get the word out," to reach the affected stakeholders, and to position an issue or issues in the public consciousness. Foundation grantees must have effective communication strategies and skills in order to inform policy, advocate for change, or persuade users and consumers that their technologies are workable. We must also help grantees begin to identify how the voices of the poor and excluded can be better engaged, and how research, technology and programs can better incorporate their opinions and values.

Communication for social change is a technique for engaging communities in their own problem solving and decision making, then using such decisions to communicate essential information to all those impacted by the issue. It is defined simply as a "process of public and private dialogue wherein people define who they are, what they want, how to get what they need." Social change is defined as change in people's lives as they themselves define such change. This work seeks particularly to improve the lives of the politically and economically marginalized, and is informed by principles of tolerance, self-determination, equity, social justice and active participation for all.

This special program finds ways to help poor people increase their abilities to use communication approaches and technology to improve their lives. For example, in rural Zimbabwe we are working with youth groups as they develop mechanisms to talk about AIDS and the dangers of the disease among their peers. Through drama, song, public-opinion polling, community dialogue circles and teen workshops, they are learning that behavioral change cannot be sustained absent effective communication among adolescents, and between youth and their parents. And, that information dissemination alone--or the distribution of pamphlets, posters and ads--is not effective communication. By testing community-developed approaches and evaluating their success using an integrated social-science model of social change, we are hopeful that the Foundation and our grantees can learn techniques for sustaining positive behavioral change which will allow youth to avoid risky sexual activities that can lead to HIV infection.

Global Philanthropy

For several years, the Foundation has funded small projects designed to encourage philanthropy on a global basis. It is part of the Foundation's ongoing effort to mobilize new resources in order to adequately tackle the world's most critical problems, as well as to develop partnerships with other potential funders.

Foundation grantmaking in this area seeks to learn about new trends in giving, to offer training in philanthropy to those who have newly acquired wealth, to help sustain the philanthropic sector in the United States, and to encourage growth of the philanthropic sector in other parts of the world. This work incorporates two ongoing projects: The Philanthropy Workshop, a training experience in strategic giving, and The Next Generation Leadership program for young, promising leaders. We are also encouraging new philanthropic ideas while continuing to explore new partnerships and collaborations with existing as well as newer foundations.

In the year 2000, we began development of an unique philanthropic investment concept that we hope will inspire new ways of giving worldwide. It is a concept based on using information technology to build networks of effective philanthropists and leaders. This project will create a new philanthropy vehicle through which we hope to create a strong, global giving community that "invests" in and supports a serious collection of philanthropic portfolios ranging from health care to education to environmental issues.

Public/Private Partnerships

Several years ago, the Foundation undertook an effort known as the Program Venture Experiment (ProVenEx). ProVenEx seeks to catalyze private sector investments in areas that will benefit the poor and excluded. To accomplish this goal, ProVenEx makes investments in early-stage and growing companies with business strategies or technologies that will further the Foundation's philanthropic priorities, for example, new medical technologies/drugs against infectious diseases such as HIV, tuberculosis and malaria, and strategies to expand employment opportunities for inner-city residents. To date, ProVenEx has committed $2.5 million to two companies: a small biotech company developing a microbicide to help protect women against sexually transmitted diseases, and a social venture enterprise which seeks to expand training and job opportunities for disadvantaged people.

THE PROGRAMS: REGIONAL OFFICES

Over the course of its history, the Rockefeller Foundation has worked in many parts of the world. Our earliest work in hookworm, malaria and yellow fever was rapidly extended into Latin America and Asia. John D. Rockefeller himself, perhaps spurred by the Christian missionary movement of the 19th century, was especially interested in the modernization of China, where the Foundation operated its largest-ever program at the Peking Union Medical College. During the 1930s and 1940s, we worked extensively throughout Europe.

In the past two decades, we have concentrated our overseas work in eastern and southern Africa, the most economically deprived world region. Much of our early work involved posting technical officers overseas. Due to budgetary constraints and changing contexts, we withdrew our large field staff in the 1970s. Since then, we have operated with fewer than 10 overseas officers servicing specific programs.

For the future, we find it difficult to conceive of a global foundation based exclusively in New York City. The concept of a "global foundation" implies global awareness, an open mind-set, consciousness of globally shared (and differing) values, and an institutional capacity to harness global knowledge and learn from diverse societies. It also implies the intention to apply knowledge on the ground among specific people and in specific places. Foundation programs thus will adopt a global-planning framework, but will decentralize the implementation of the programs, wherever feasible, in response to local contexts, people and institutions.

Recognizing that the Foundation cannot hope to work everywhere, staff planning proposes that we seek means of enhancing our "field presence" in selected key regions. The means include residential staff, international networks, advisory inputs of local leaders and other modalities.

Our current regional bases vary greatly in their functions. Bellagio is the site of an international conference and study center under the direct management of the Foundation. The most developed multi-thematic engagement is in Africa, while offices in Asia, Latin America and on the U.S. West Coast service single programs. Several of our geographic bases will be developed into more ample regional offices, with full-time, resident professional staff. These regional offices will support, promote and supplement global thematic programs.

Bellagio

The Bellagio Study and Conference Center is a Foundation-operated charitable activity. Our proposed year 2000 budget continues Bellagio as a Foundation-administered project. The Bellagio Committee will explore greater diversity and quality among selected artists and scholars for the future. It also encourages the Foundation to pursue more focused and sustained program interactions based at the facility.

Nairobi and Harare

In year 2000, these two Africa offices will have seven full-time program officers — five in Nairobi and two in Harare. These officers will conduct ongoing programs in Food Security, Health Equity, Population, African Higher Education and Creativity & Culture. As such, the Africa offices will take the lead in the female education program, the strengthening of Makerere University and the collaboration with the Carnegie Corporation of New York and the Ford and MacArthur foundations in the Partnership to Strengthen African Universities.

Bangkok, Mexico City and San Francisco

The Foundation's offices in Bangkok (Food Security), Mexico City (Food Security) and San Francisco (Working Communities) execute single-theme program objectives. These offices are in different stages of development and implementation. San Francisco just recently opened. Mexico City is just completing its grantmaking activities and Bangkok is in transition with adjustments to program priorities currently under way.

The Foundation makes grants according to four program themes and one cross-theme, which are areas of grantmaking. Each theme and cross-theme has a program strategy that is explained in detail in the strategy section of this Report.

What follows is the listing of all Foundation grants made in the year 2000, including competitive programs, fellowships and foundation-administered programs or projects.

The grants are organized in these categories: by themes, cross-theme, Regional Programs and Special Programs (which includes Global Philanthropy, Next Generation Leadership, Population and the Cairo Agenda, Communication for Social Change and Other Grants).

Grants are listed in alphabetical order by line of work within each strategy and Fellowships/Grants made to individuals for advanced study or research are alphabetized by the person's surname, as determined by American English usage conventions. Recipients of competitive programs in Creativity & Culture are also included in the alphabetical listings.

In the year 2000 the Foundation made grants and fellowships totaling US$141,547,819.

Applying Science and Technology

ASIAN RICE BIOTECHNOLOGY NETWORK

Agricultural Genetics Institute, Hanoi, Vietnam $100,000 for research to utilize molecular marker-aided breeding to develop new elite and hybrid rice varieties with enhanced resistance to bacterial and fungal diseases as well as insect pests for Vietnamese rice farmers

Center for the Application of Molecular Biology to International Agriculture, Canberra, Australia $50,000 to develop and disseminate new technologies for genetic analysis and its application to rice breeding

Central Research Institute for Food Crops, Bogor, Indonesia $50,000 to conduct field trials of rice cultivars improved through marker-aided selection of appropriate bacterial leaf blight resistance genes for Java and Bali, Indonesia

China National Rice Research Institute, Hangzhou, China $5,300 toward the costs of training in nonradioactive protocols for nucleic acid labeling and detection for two scientists from North Korea

China National Rice Research Institute, Hangzhou, China $50,000 for use by its Research Library for the purchase of journals and periodicals

Chinese Academy of Sciences, Beijing, China $40,000 for use by its Institute of Genetics to help maintain the capacity to conduct research and provide training in rice biotechnology with a focus on resistance to diseases and improved nutrition

Chinese Academy of Sciences, Beijing, China $3,000 toward the costs of training in rice biotechnology at the Academy's Institute of Genetics for four scientists from North Korea

Chinese Academy of Sciences, Beijing, China $30,930 to enable two scientists from North Korea to receive training in rice biotechnology in the laboratory of Zhu Lihuang at the Academy's Institute of Genetics

Chinese Academy of Sciences, Beijing, China $30,930 to enable two scientists from North Korea to receive training in rice biotechnology in the laboratory of Zhu Zhen at the Academy's Institute of Genetics

Chinese Academy of Sciences, Beijing, China $60,000 for use by its Institute of Genetics for research on insect resistance and improved starch quality in transgenic rice

Department of Agriculture, Thailand, Bangkok, Thailand $150,000 for use by its Biotechnology Research and Development Center for research on the molecular characterization of major rice diseases in Thailand such as bacterial blight and blast and the development of disease-resistant rice through molecular-assisted breeding

John Dillé, Rock Hill, South Carolina $10,000 toward the cost of publishing the Rice Biotechnology Quarterly

Foundation-administered project: $40,000 toward the costs of producing a book documenting the National Rice Biotechnology Network in India

Foundation-administered project: $43,800 for administrative support of the Rockefeller Foundation biotechnology program in India

Fudan University, Shanghai, China $20,000 for use by its Baoshan Agrobiotechnological Center for research to improve rice yield potential through tetraploidization and dihaploidization

G. B. Pant University of Agriculture and Technology, Pantnagar, India $25,050 for research on the enhancement of resistance to blast in rice

Haryana Agricultural University, Hisar, India $90,000 for molecular marker and transformation research leading to the development of drought and salinity tolerant varieties of basmati rice for use by Indian farmers

Huazhong Agricultural University, Wuhan, Hubei, China $45,390 toward the costs of training in rice biotechnology for four scientists from North Korea

Huazhong Agricultural University, Wuhan, Hubei, China $100,000 toward the costs of research and training on characterizing the biological mechanisms of heterosis and molecular breeding of hybrid rice.

International Centre for Genetic Engineering and Biotechnology, New Delhi, India $2,100 for research on marker-assisted selection of gall midge resistance in cultivated rice

International Rice Research Institute, Makati City, Philippines $85,000 for research, in collaboration with the Directorate of Rice Research, Hyderabad, India, on the molecular tagging and introgression of genes for stemborer resistance from wild species of Oryza into "new plant type" and other elite breeding lines of rice

International Rice Research Institute, Makati City, Philippines $26,173 for research, in collaboration with the University of Dhaka, on transformation of rice for enhanced salt tolerance

International Rice Research Institute, Makati City, Philippines $500,000 to support research advancing the application of biotechnology to rice breeding and the transfer of the results to national rice-breeding programs in Asia

International Rice Research Institute, Makati City, Philippines $20,000 for research, in collaboration with the Central Rice Research Institute, Cuttack, India, on the use of marker-assisted breeding for bacterial blight and blast resistance in rice varieties adapted for eastern India

International Rice Research Institute, Makati City, Philippines $50,000 toward the costs of the Fourth International Rice Genetics Symposium held at the Institute in October 2000

Kasetsart University, Bangkok, Thailand $117,105 to provide in-country M Sc and Ph D training in rice molecular-marker technology and simultaneously conduct research leading to improved rice varieties for Thai farmers

Kasetsart University, Bangkok, Thailand $72,000 for research on the production of rice ragged stunt disease resistance in Thai rice.

National Crop Experiment Station, Suwon, South Korea $11,450 to provide additional funds for a study of marker-assisted discovery and transfer of wild quantitative trait loci (QTLs) into elite rice cultivars using advanced backcross QTL analysis, to be undertaken by Biotechnology Career Fellow Ahn Sang-Nag, under the direction of Susan R. McCouch, Department of Plant Breeding, Cornell University, Ithaca, New York

Osmania University, Hyderabad, India $18,546 to introduce new genes for resistance to insects such as yellow stem borer and brown plant hopper via genetic transformation of rice

Peking University, Beijing, China $40,000 toward the costs of a study on rice trypsin inhibitor genes and their application to the development of fungal resistance in transgenic plants

Philippine Rice Research Institute, Maligaya, Muñoz, Nueva Ecija, Philippines $25,000 to enable scientists from developing countries to participate in the Asian Agricultural Congress to be held in Manila, Philippines, Apr 24-27, 2001

Philippine Rice Research Institute, Maligaya Muñoz, Nueva Ecija, Philippines $273,000 for research in rice biotechnology leading to improved rice varietal development for Philippine farmers

Rural Development Administration, Suwon, South Korea $66,700 for use by its National Institute of Agricultural Science & Technology for research on the development of map-based cloning and transformation for rice improvement

Swiss Federal Institute of Technology, Zurich, Switzerland $45,000 for research, in collaboration with the Cuu Long Delta Rice Research Institute, Ormon, Cantho, Vietnam, on genetic transformation to develop Vietnamese rice varieties enriched with vitamin A and higher iron content

Tamil Nadu Agricultural University, Coimbatore, India $110,100 for use by its Center for Plant Molecular Biology to support rice breeding for southern India through the use of marker-assisted selection

Tamil Nadu Agricultural University, Coimbatore, India $205,000 to conduct research using molecular markers and plant transformation to develop insect-resistant and drought-tolerant rice varieties for use by farmers in southern India

University of Agricultural Sciences, Bangalore, India $55,000 for research on molecular marker-assisted introgression of major and multiple genes for enhanced blast resistance in rice

University of Hyderabad, Hyderabad, India $40,000 for a study of genetic improvement of rice for water-limited environments, to be undertaken by Biotechnology Career Fellow Arjuna R. Reddy at the Department of Biological Sciences, Purdue University, West Lafayette, Indiana

University of Ottawa, Ottawa, Canada $50,000 to develop and test transgenic rice lines with enhanced tolerance to environmental stresses such as drought and saline soil conditions

University of Zimbabwe, Harare, Zimbabwe $35,000 toward the costs of a study, "Strengthening Rural Food Security Through Improved Smallholder Soyabean/Maize Production Technologies," to be undertaken by Food Security Career Development Fellow Sheunesu Mpepereki

West Africa Rice Development Association, Bouake, Ivory Coast $55,000 for research, in collaboration with Cornell University and the Institute of Agricultural Research for Development, Cameroon, on the development of molecular markers for resistance to rice yellow mottle virus

West Africa Rice Development Association, Bouake, Ivory Coast: $205,850 to strengthen rice biotechnology research, including the use of anther culture to produce interspecific hybrids between Asian and African rice

Zhejiang Agricultural University, Hangzhou, China: $80,000 for breeding, safety evaluation and insect-resistance management for rice modified to express an insecticidal protein from the bacterium Bacillus thuringiensis.

INTEGRATED NUTRIENT AND ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT

Africa University, Mutare, Zimbabwe: $56,000 to train soil and plant analytical laboratory technologists in southern Africa in procedures for data quality control and equipment maintenance, in order to improve the quality and relevance of data provided to scientists working on soil fertility problems of poor farmers.

Brazilian Agricultural Research Enterprise, Brasilia, Brazil: $102,984 for use by Embrapa Milho e Sorgo toward the costs of conducting two training workshops on the theme, Improving Phosphorous Acquisition Efficiency in Marginal Soils, in Sahelian West Africa and southern Africa.

Brazilian Agricultural Research Enterprise, Brasilia, Brazil: $3,968 toward the costs of publication of the proceedings of a workshop entitled, Improving Phosphorous Acquisition Efficiency in Marginal Soils.

Cornell University, Ithaca, New York: $85,000 for use by its Albert R. Mann Library toward the continued education on and marketing of the Essential Electronic Agricultural Library in Africa.

Foundation-administered project: $75,000 for an external review of Rockefeller Foundation-funded programs at the Department of Research and Specialist Services, Ministry of Lands and Agriculture, Zimbabwe.

Foundation-administered project: $80,000 to support the work of a team of consultants who will systematize, analyze and assess the current Food Security soil fertility and integrated nutrient-management program in sub-Saharan Africa, providing recommendations for program integration and future directions.

Foundation-administered project: $17,772 toward the costs of a meeting to develop a strategy for improving African soil fertility to be held in Bellagio, Italy, in June 2001.

Inter-American Development Bank, Washington, D.C.: $150,000 for use by the Technical Administrative Secretariat of its Regional Fund for Agricultural Technology in Latin America and the Caribbean during its consultation phase.

International Center for Information on Cover Crops, Tegucigalpa, Honduras: $95,000 to support the development and maintenance of a database to store and manage information related to green-manure cover-crop systems in the tropics.

International Centre for Research in Agroforestry, Nairobi, Kenya: $482,954 to support research and development to promote wider adoption of agroforestry technologies such as improved fallow for soil-fertility management by smallholder farmers in southern Africa

International Centre for Research in Agroforestry, Nairobi, Kenya: $665,400 to develop the techniques and capacity for remote sensing of soil quality in Africa and its application in better targeting of integrated nutrient-management technologies.

International Institute of Rural Reconstruction, Silang, Philippines: $15,000 toward the costs of a workshop on managing the process of scaling up sustainable agriculture initiatives, held in Silang, Philippines, March/April 2000.

International Institute of Tropical Agriculture, Ibadan, Nigeria: $50,000 for support of the International Symposium on Balanced Nutrient Management Systems, held Oct. 9-12, 2000, in Cotonou, Republic of Benin.

International Institute of Tropical Agriculture, Miami, Florida: $150,000 for research on technical constraints to widespread adoption of the legume Mucuna pruriens as a companion crop in green-manure cover-crop systems used by smallholder farmers in the tropics.

International Maize and Wheat Improvement Center, Mexico City, Mexico: $20,000 to support the development and maintenance of a database for storage and management of information related to green-manure cover-crop systems in the tropics.

International Maize and Wheat Improvement Center, Mexico City, Mexico: $1,276,200 to support a regional network of scientists in southern Africa developing technologies, policies and institutional instruments for more widespread use of improved soil-fertility management options by poor farmers in southern Africa.

Kenya Agricultural Research Institute, Nairobi, Kenya $15,000 toward the costs of the 18th Conference of the Soil Science Society of East Africa held in November 2000 in Mombasa, Kenya

Kenya Agricultural Research Institute, Nairobi, Kenya $17,000 for use by the National Dryland Farming Research Center, Katumani, to support publication of reports on Phase I of the Collaboration on Agricultural/Resource Modeling and Applications in Semi-Arid Kenya, and development of Phase II of the project.

Kenya Agricultural Research Institute, Nairobi, Kenya $37,032 for use by the Embu Regional Research Centre to support the continuation of the long-term soil organic matter-modeling project at Machang'a and Mutuobare agricultural research stations

Kenyatta University, Nairobi, Kenya $65,000 to provide studentships and related expenses for research on the enhancement of soil productivity by use of low-input technologies on the smallholder farms of the central highlands of Kenya

Ministry of Agriculture and Irrigation, Malawi, Lilongwe, Malawi: $187,621 to support research at the Chitedze Agricultural Research Station of Malawi on development and dissemination of integrated soil-fertility management technologies for improving food security on smallholder farms in Malawi

Ministry of Agriculture and Irrigation, Malawi, Lilongwe, Malawi $35,000 for use by its Department of Agricultural Research and Technical Services toward the costs of conducting and analyzing nationwide agronomic trials on improved organic technologies for maize production by smallholder farmers of Malawi

Ministry of Lands and Agriculture, Zimbabwe, Causeway, Zimbabwe $59,000 for use by the Agronomy Research Institute of the Department of Research and Specialist Services, to continue development of integrated soil-fertility management strategies for smallholder farmers in Zimbabwe

Ministry of Lands and Agriculture, Zimbabwe, Causeway, Zimbabwe $12,375 for use by the Department of Research and Specialist Services, toward the costs of a consultative process for the development of a strategic plan on integrated nutrient-management research for the smallholder farming sector in Zimbabwe

Ministry of Lands and Agriculture, Zimbabwe, Causeway, Zimbabwe $100,000 for use by its Chemistry and Soils Research Institute to support the development of appropriate processing, preservation and utilization technologies for soybeans and other legumes in order to improve food and nutritional security within poor rural households in Zimbabwe

Ministry of Lands and Agriculture, Zimbabwe, Causeway, Zimbabwe $19,580 for use by its Agronomy Research Institute to support microeconomics research on soil-fertility management technologies being tested on farmers' fields

Ministry of Lands and Agriculture, Zimbabwe: $35,000 for a policy dialogue, administered through the Agricultural Production and Food Security Task Force, on enhancing smallholder farmer food security through improved cropping systems

National Agricultural Research Organization, Entebbe, Uganda $118,000 for the establishment of a Geographical Information System facility and national soils-reference database

Sustainable Community Oriented Development Programme, Segu, Kenya $676,850 to continue implementation of farmer-participatory trial programs for farm input supply to promote crop biodiversity, and to develop appropriate integrated nutrient-management practices for increased agricultural development

Tropical Soil Biology and Fertility Programme, Nairobi, Kenya $32,034 for collaborative research with the Department of Agricultural Economics and Extension, University of Zimbabwe, on the economics of using animal manure for soil-fertility management by poor farmers in resettled communal lands of Zimbabwe

Tropical Soil Biology and Fertility Programme, Nairobi, Kenya $82,800 to develop and disseminate improved technologies for managing animal manure for improved soil fertility and crop yields on smallholder farmers' fields in Zimbabwe and Malawi

Tropical Soil Biology and Fertility Programme, Nairobi, Kenya $15,000 toward the costs of the Ninth African Association of Biological Nitrogen Fixation Congress held in Nairobi, Kenya, September 2000

Tropical Soil Biology and Fertility Programme, Nairobi, Kenya $9,000 for support of the All African Biological Nitrogen Fixation Congress held in Nairobi, September 2000

Tropical Soil Biology and Fertility Programme, Nairobi, Kenya $400,000 to support research on soil biology and ecology as a component of integrated soils management in African farming systems

Tropical Soil Biology and Fertility Programme, Nairobi, Kenya $21,605 for support of a symposium on organic resource-management technologies held in Nairobi, Kenya, September 2000

University of Berne, Berne, Switzerland $106,856 for use by the Natural Resources Monitoring, Modeling, and Management project toward the costs of field research in Kenya on developing natural resource-management tools for use by farmers, planners and policymakers

University of Malawi, Zomba, Malawi $19,000 toward the costs of coordinating activities of the Economics and Policy Working Group - Malawi, an initiative within the Soil Fertility Network for Maize-Based Farming Systems in Malawi

University of Missouri-Columbia, Columbia, Missouri $6,000 to continue its collaboration with the Kenya Agricultural Research Institute to complete the book, "Transforming the Agricultural Research System in Kenya: Lessons for Africa "

University of Nairobi, Nairobi, Kenya $10,634 to support a workshop on environmental management and poverty alleviation in the Lake Victoria Basin

University of Zimbabwe, Harare, Zimbabwe $20,800 toward the costs of coordinating activities of the Economics and Policy Working Group for Smallholder Food Security in Africa

RESILIENT CROPS FOR CHALLENGING ENVIRONMENTS

Abraham Blum, Tel Aviv, Israel $60,000 to establish a Web site to serve the information and communication needs of scientists working to create more resilient crop species for less favorable environments worldwide, with emphasis on drought tolerance in cereals

Center for the Application of Molecular Biology to International Agriculture, Canberra, Australia $100,000 for the adaptation, optimization and provision of microarray-based technologies for marker-assisted selection of maize germplasm for Striga resistance

Cuu Long Delta Rice Research Institute, Omon, Cantho, Vietnam $160,000 to conduct rice-biotechnology research leading to improved rice varieties for Vietnamese farmers

Donald Danforth Plant Science Center, St. Louis, Missouri $55,000 toward the costs of a symposium on the Genetic Improvement of Crop Plants for Production in Water-Limited Environments, to be held in St. Louis, Missouri, 2001

Emmanuel Okogbenin, Ibadan, Nigeria. $16,500 toward the costs of research on the genetic mapping of cassava at the International Center for Tropical Agriculture, Cali, Colombia

Foundation-administered project: $80,000 toward the costs of operating the Foundation's program on applying science and technology to improving food security

Foundation-administered project: $20,000 to support the participation of developing-country scientists in the Second International Apomixis Conference to be held in Como, Italy, Apr 24-28, 2001

Haryana Agricultural University, Hisar, India $30,741 for research and Ph D training leading to the use of molecular markers to enhance disease resistance in sorghum

Indira Gandhi Agricultural University, Raipur, India $160,000 for research on field screening, molecular genetic analysis, and breeding leading to more drought tolerant and gall midge-resistant rice varieties

Institute of Agricultural Sciences of Rwanda, Butare, Rwanda $13,000 toward the costs of research conducted in collaboration with the International Center for Tropical Agriculture and other national agricultural-research organizations on genetic improvement of bush and climbing beans for smallholder production in Africa

International Center for Tropical Agriculture, Cali, Colombia $449,000 toward the costs of research conducted in collaboration with national agricultural-research organizations on genetic improvement of bush and climbing beans for smallholder production in Africa

International Center for Tropical Agriculture, Cali, Colombia $160,000 to support ongoing research using advanced biotechnologies to produce more resilient and higher-yielding rice varieties for Latin America

International Center for Tropical Agriculture, Cali, Colombia $321,000 for research on the molecular mapping of genes conferring resistance to the cassava mosaic disease.

International Centre of Insect Physiology and Ecology, Nairobi, Kenya $75,000 for research on the characterization of allelochemicals involved in Striga suppression by Desmodium species and screening for related signals in selected legumes

International Centre of Insect Physiology and Ecology, Nairobi, Kenya: $104,962 to continue support for its collaboration with the Uganda National Banana Research Program on socioeconomic studies to support technology development for banana-cropping systems including integrated pest management

International Crops Research Institute for the Semi-Arid Tropics, Andhra Pradesh, India. $98,000 to conduct a workshop and training course on state-of-the-art field screening of cereals, with emphasis on rice, for drought tolerance, as part of a national program for genetic improvement of this trait

International Crops Research Institute for the Semi-Arid Tropics, Andhra Pradesh, India $209,988 for field screening and molecular genetic analysis aimed at creating more resilient crops, with emphasis on improving drought tolerance in cereals

International Crops Research Institute for the Semi-Arid Tropics, Andhra Pradesh, India $530,446 to support a joint research project with the Institut de Economie Rurale, Mali, on Guinea Sorghum Hybrids: Bringing the Benefits of Hybrid Technology to a Staple Crop of Sub-Saharan Africa

International Institute of Tropical Agriculture, Ibadan, Nigeria $991,680 to support the development of integrated pest-management techniques for banana weevil control

International Institute of Tropical Agriculture, Ibadan, Nigeria $240,000 for the development and use of molecular markers linked to genes conferring resistance to African cassava mosaic disease in African cassava germplasm

International Institute of Tropical Agriculture, Ibadan, Nigeria $18,420 toward the costs of publication and distribution of the proceedings of the World Cowpea Research Conference III, held in Ibadan, Nigeria, September 2000

International Maize and Wheat Improvement Center, Mexico City, Mexico $274,550 toward the costs of the on-farm testing and seeds component of the Southern Africa Drought and Low Soil Fertility Network's project to develop drought-tolerant varieties of maize

International Maize and Wheat Improvement Center, Mexico City, Mexico $285,700 for research on engineering resistance in maize to the parasitic weed Striga, one of the major constraints to crop production in Africa

International Maize and Wheat Improvement Center, Mexico City, Mexico $10,000 toward the costs of a series of workshops on maize agronomy to be organized by the Center's Eastern and Central African Maize and Wheat Research Network and held in Uganda, Tanzania and Kenya

International Plant Genetic Resources Institute, Rome, Italy $170,000 for use by its International Network for the improvement of Banana and Plantain for research to determine banana baseline information for eastern and southern Africa.

International Plant Genetic Resources Institute, Rome, Italy $13,651 for use by its International Network for the Improvement of Banana and Plantain for research to identify and collect the original edible diploid germplasm of East African Highland Bananas

John Innes Centre, Norwich, United Kingdom $157,400 toward the costs of studentships for a cooperative program on rice biotechnology with the West Africa Rice Development Association, Ivory Coast

Lowlands Agricultural and Technical Services Limited, Kisumu, Kenya $3,000 to enable staff member Moses Onim to visit the Maharashtra Hybrid Seed Company, Hyderabad, India, to discuss seed-processing and marketing strategies.

Kenya Agricultural Research Institute, Nairobi, Kenya $22,000 toward the costs of research conducted in collaboration with national agricultural research organizations on genetic improvement of bush and climbing beans for smallholder production in Africa

Kenya Agricultural Research Institute, Nairobi, Kenya $3,303 toward the costs of seed multiplication and dissemination of Striga-resistant maize varieties in Striga-infested areas of western Kenya

Kenya Agricultural Research Institute, Nairobi, Kenya $350,000 for improving banana production in Kenya through distribution of clean planting material produced via tissue culture

Kenya Agricultural Research Institute, Nairobi, Kenya $69,115 for use by the National Agricultural Research Laboratories to support the activities of the Legume Research Network Project and the coordination of the Soil Management Projects at sites in Kisiu and Kitale

Kenya Agricultural Research Institute, Nairobi, Kenya $8,786 toward the costs of a workshop to discuss sustainable seed systems for small-scale farmers in sub-Saharan Africa, held in Kenya, Mar. 13-15, 2000

Kenya Agricultural Research Institute, Nairobi, Kenya $90,000 toward project costs for accelerated multiplication and distribution of healthy planting materials of improved cassava varieties in western Kenya

Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda $9,980 to support the Fifth Triennial Congress of the Africa Potato Association to be held in Kampala, Uganda

Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda $90,815 to support the micropropagation of selected banana cultivars for Ugandan farmers

Michigan State University, East Lansing, Michigan $26,000 for use by Michigan State University Press to edit and publish "Cassava: Africa's Best-Kept Secret," and to ship 750 copies of the finished book to the International Institute of Tropical Agriculture for free distribution in Africa

Ministry of Agriculture, Malawi, Lilongwe, Malawi $169,565 for use by its Department of Agricultural Research and Technical Services toward project costs for improving farmers' maize yields through managing maize streak virus, Turicum leaf blight and gray leaf spot diseases

National Agricultural Research Organization, Entebbe, Uganda $250,000 to support the banana cropping-systems project

National Agricultural Research Organization, Entebbe, Uganda $41,000 toward the costs of research conducted in collaboration with the International Center for Tropical Agriculture and other national agricultural-research organizations on genetic improvement of bush and climbing beans for smallholder production in Africa.

National Center for Genetic Engineering and Biotechnology, Bangkok, Thailand $85,000 to identify quantitative trait loci for drought tolerance in rice and test their efficacy for marker-assisted rice breeding

National Institute for Agronomic Research, Maputo, Mozambique $249,450 for support to the national maize-breeding program in Mozambique

Purdue University, West Lafayette, Indiana $237,808 for research to produce more durable resistance in sorghum to the parasitic weed Striga by characterizing the mechanisms of resistance and the genes responsible, and then combining them in ways that enhance durability of resistance

Purdue University, West Lafayette, Indiana $40,000 toward the costs of a workshop on developing a strategy on biotechnology for cowpea improvement in Africa, to be held in Dakar, Senegal

Rice Research Institute, Bangkok, Thailand $150,000 to conduct field screening of rice for drought tolerance at multiple locations in Thailand's drought-prone north and northeastern regions

Rothamsted Experimental Station, Hertfordshire, United Kingdom $5,000 for use by the Institute of Arable Crops Research for research on the characterization of allelochemicals involved in Striga suppression by Desmodium spp. and screening for related signals in selected legumes.

Tamil Nadu Agricultural University, Coimbatore, India $84,500 for research on identifying genes associated with water stress tolerance in rice

Tropical Soil Biology and Fertility Programme, Nairobi, Kenya $10,422 to support publishing a Web page and preparation of the proceedings of the Forum for Organic Resource Management and Agricultural Technologies symposium held in Nairobi, Kenya, September 2000

United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. $10,000 for use by the Plant Genome Research Program of the Agricultural Research Service for support of travel of Third World scientists to attend the Plant and Animal Genome IX meeting held in San Diego, California, Jan. 13-17, 2001

University of Agricultural Sciences, Bangalore, India $55,000 to identify molecular markers for drought tolerance and utilize them in a rainfed rice-breeding program

University of Hyderabad, Hyderabad, India $480,000 to conduct rice genomic research and provide leadership and coordination to the national Indian network on rice improvement for drought tolerance

University of Nairobi, Nairobi, Kenya $66,760 for research on the effects of maize and sesame mixed or rotation cropping systems on Striga infestation

University of Ottawa, Ottawa, Canada $70,000 to undertake research and conduct biosafety assessments of transgenic crops with new genes for insect resistance

University of Zimbabwe, Harare, Zimbabwe $87,150 for research on improving disease resistance in cowpea through genetic engineering

West Africa Rice Development Association, Bouake, Ivory Coast $67,000 toward the costs of a workshop on Sustainable Rice-Based Production in Africa, to be held in M'Be, Côte d'Ivoire, Apr. 9-12, 2001

West Africa Rice Development Association, Bouake, Ivory Coast $380,100 toward project costs for building West African capacity in rice-breeding research

Yvonne Lokko, Accra, Ghana $31,500 to conduct research at the International Institute of Tropical Agriculture, leading to a Ph.D. degree from the University of Ghana, on the genetic analysis of host plant resistance to African cassava mosaic disease

Enabling Farmer Participation

CROPS PRODUCTION SYSTEMS

Center for Research and Advanced Studies of the National Polytechnic Institute, Mexico City, Mexico $108,000 to engineer cereal plants for increased tolerance to aluminum toxicity in soils and enhanced phosphate uptake

International Center for Information on Cover Crops, Tegucigalpa, Honduras: $67,000 toward the costs of a workshop on expanding uses of Mucuna and investigating the problems of anti-nutritional factors in the plant held in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Apr. 26–29, 2000

International Centre for Research in Agroforestry, Nairobi, Kenya $18,500 For two workshops focusing on Integrated Assessment of Soil and Water Quality in the Lake Victoria Basin of East Africa and Intensification in the East African Highlands: The Dynamics of Agroforestry and Livestock Strategies for Building Natural Resource Capital

International Livestock Research Institute, Nairobi, Kenya $45,000 to develop a spatially referenced crop- and livestock-production database for eastern and southern Africa

Kenya Agricultural Research Institute, Nairobi, Kenya $38,874 to continue support for on-farm research in improved soil management at sites of the Kisii Regional Research Centre

Kenya Agricultural Research Institute, Nairobi, Kenya $41,126 to continue support for on-farm research in improved soil management at the Kitale Regional Research Center

Michigan State University, East Lansing, Michigan $18,750 for use by the Department of Agricultural Economics to continue supporting research on developing profitable downstream fertilizer-supply channels for smallholders in western Kenya

National Agricultural Research Organization, Entebbe, Uganda $5,774 toward the costs of a workshop organized by NARO's Namulonge Agricultural and Animal Production Research Institute to discuss sustainable seed systems for small-scale farmers in Uganda

John Ongecha, Kisii, Kenya $30,000 for research on soil fertility enhancement as a strategy for managing beanfly infestation in maize-bean systems in East Africa

Scientific and Industrial Research and Development Centre, Harare, Zimbabwe $9,108 for use by the Biotechnology Research Institute to enable a Rockefeller Foundation-funded biotechnologist to attend and present a paper at the Sixth International Congress of Plant Molecular Biology held in Quebec, Canada, Jun. 18–24, 2000, and to visit collaborating scientists in the United States and Europe

Siaya Community Oriented Development Programme, Segwa, Kenya $77,000 for further development and implementation of farmer participatory trial programs to promote the use of the appropriate fertilizer types and crop residue management practices in order to restore soil fertility and improve food production in smallholder farming systems in western Kenya

Sustainable Agricultural Centre for Research and Development in Africa, Bungoma, Kenya $5,000 toward the costs of creating better growing opportunities for legumes within the maize-legume intercropping systems in east Africa

Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas $10,000 for use by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station to support the participation of African scientists in the 16th Symposium of the International Farming Systems Association held in Santiago, Chile, Nov. 27–29, 2000

University of Malawi, Zomba, Malawi $59,125 for use by Bunda College of Agriculture to conduct a study on the socioeconomic factors affecting the adoption of organic soil fertility management technologies by smallholder farmers in Malawi

Youth for Action, Hyderabad, India $155,000 to support strengthening farmers' capacity for innovation in a semi-arid region in India and to test a participatory model for agricultural technology adaptation and diffusion

IMPROVED CROP VARIETIES AND SEED PRODUCTION

International Maize and Wheat Improvement Center, Mexico City, Mexico $427,000 toward project costs for strengthening maize seed supply systems for small-scale farmers in western Kenya and Uganda

Ministry of Lands and Agriculture, Zimbabwe, Causeway, Zimbabwe $139,970 for use by the Department of Research and Specialist Services toward support of maize open-pollinated varieties ecosystem breeding in Zimbabwe

West Africa Rice Development Association, Bouake, Ivory Coast $371,140 toward the costs of a project to develop farmer participatory approaches to technology development and dissemination in Mali and Nigeria

PARTNERSHIP FOR SOIL, WATER AND NUTRIENT MANAGEMENT

Environmental Action Team, Kitale, Kenya $112,527 to continue support for adaptive research on biological alternatives for soil-fertility management for maize production

Foundation-administered project: $85,000 to strengthen the Food Security's Partnerships for Soils, Water and Nutrient Management program through the establishment of an advisory committee and consultation with experts on strategic program areas, and through the promotion of linkages and exchange of experiences among grantees

Infanta Integrated Community Development Assistance, Inc., Quezon, Philippines $50,000 to strengthen and document its more than 20 years of community-based field work and to explore participatory approaches for agricultural innovation and diffusion

International Institute of Rural Reconstruction, Silang, Philippines $30,000 to support an international conference on advancing participatory technology development to be held in the Philippines, 2001

Kenya Agricultural Research Institute, Nairobi, Kenya $160,227 toward the costs of incorporating the Farmer Field School approach to agricultural innovation and diffusion into its programs on soil-management and legume research

National Institute of Soils and Fertilizers, Hanoi, Vietnam $98,000 to establish and implement integrated crop management Farmer Field Schools in northern Vietnam, and to document and analyze the process

Network for Studies on Rural Development, Chapingo, Mexico $92,000 toward the costs of a pilot project that will test the feasibility and potential of 60 Farmer Field Schools in the states of Oaxaca and Chiapas, Mexico

PELUM Association, Harare, Zimbabwe $51,000 to support a series of workshops organized by the PELUM Association and its partner organizations in eastern and southern Africa focusing on the analysis of constraints and opportunities for promoting sustainable agriculture in the region

Swedish University of Agricultural Sciences, Uppsala, Sweden $46,000 for use by its Department of Rural Development Studies to support an African student in the Master's Programme in Development Research, Application and Theory, focusing on the Farmer Field School approach to technology adaptation and diffusion

University of Malawi, Zomba, Malawi $25,000 to support the Agricultural and Policy Research Unit of Bunda College of Agriculture, for a study on the social costs of soil erosion and its effects on food productivity, incomes and food security in Malawi

University of Zimbabwe, Harare, Zimbabwe $38,000 to support the Department of Agricultural Economics and Extension to conduct research on factors that influence farmers' adoption of soil-fertility management technologies and the effects of alternative farm policies on increased use of these technologies by smallholder farmers in Zimbabwe

Vicente Guerrero Rural Development Project, Tlaxcala, Mexico $98,000 to strengthen and document the more than 20 years of its facilitation of farmer-led agricultural-technology dissemination in Mexico

Zimbabwe Institute of Permaculture, Harare, Zimbabwe $191,670 for use by the Schools and Colleges Permaculture Programme to promote changes in the curricula of primary, secondary and tertiary education to incorporate sustainable agricultural principles and income-generating activities to improve the food security of smallholder farmers in Zimbabwe

Strengthening Policies and Institutions

BIOSAFETY AND INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY

International Maize and Wheat Improvement Center, Mexico City, Mexico $700,000 for strengthening intellectual-property and technology-transfer management at key centers of the Consultative Group on International Agricultural Research

International Maize and Wheat Improvement Center, Mexico City, Mexico $47,300 for analysis of the distribution of welfare from the introduction of transgenic cotton varieties in Mexico

International Rice Research Institute, Makati City, Philippines $700,000 for strengthening intellectual-property and technology-transfer management at key centers of the Consultative Group on International Agricultural Research

International Rice Research Institute, Makati City, Philippines $25,000 toward the costs of a workshop on the Impact on Research and Development of Sui Generis Approaches to Plant Variety Protection of Rice in Developing Countries, held at IRRI, February 2000

International Service for the Acquisition of Agri-Biotech Applications, Ithaca, New York $40,000 to conduct a preliminary freedom-to-operate review for provitamin A rice (Golden Rice), in part as a model for training programs on intellectual-property rights

International Service for the Acquisition of Agri-Biotech Applications, Ithaca, New York $50,000 to conduct a feasibility study on the evaluation and deployment of rice genetically modified to produce provitamin A in the endosperm

Scientific and Industrial Research and Development Centre, Harare, Zimbabwe $4,615 to provide training in biosafety protocols for a scientist responsible for introducing and monitoring such protocols at the Centre

Stanford University, Stanford, California $20,000 for use by Stanford Law School toward the costs a conference on Intellectual Property and Global Biotechnology, held at the Bellagio Study and Conference Center, Bellagio, Italy, Mar 27-31, 2000

United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO), Vienna, Austria $47,460 for the further development and dissemination of an interactive computerized decision-support system for assessing risks arising from the use of genetically modified crop plants

POLICY ANALYSIS FOR EQUITABLE DEVELOPMENT

African Crop Science Society, Rustenburg, South Africa $95,570 to support the participation of Forum Principal Investigators and students in the Fifth All Africa Crop Science Congress, to be held in Nigeria, 2001

Foundation-administered project: $111,000 to help strengthen the program and governance structure of the Initiative for Development and Equity in African Agriculture

Government of Malawi, Lilongwe, Malawi $35,000 for use by the Office of the Vice President to support the Policy Analysis Initiative for evaluation of government policies in the areas of natural and environmental resources for sustainable development in Malawi

International Crops Research Institute for the Semi-Arid Tropics, Andhra Pradesh, India $438,900 to support research and development of technologies, policies and institutional mechanisms to promote wider adoption of improved soil fertility management options by smallholder farmers in the semi-arid zone of Zimbabwe

John Innes Centre, Norwich, United Kingdom $15,000 to enable developing-country speakers to participate in the conference, Global Agriculture 2020 Which Way Forward? to be held in Norwich, Apr 18-20, 2001

Steven Were Omamo, Njoro, Kenya $26,000 for a study of agricultural markets and institutions with special reference to implications for policy reform in Africa

University of Pretoria, Pretoria, South Africa $97,000 to conduct research on the diffusion to, and adoption of, agricultural biotechnologies by smallholder farmers in South Africa

University of Zimbabwe, Harare, Zimbabwe $22,100 toward the costs of a book on how Africans are leading the process of agricultural development in Africa entitled, "The Termite Strategy Transforming Rural Africa From Within"

LOCAL UNIVERSITY CAPACITY BUILDING

FORUM ON AGRICULTURAL RESOURCES HUSBANDRY

Africa University, Mutare, Zimbabwe $2,200 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support research on soil-management options for improved groundnut production in Zimbabwe

Chiang Mai University, Chiang Mai, Thailand $180,000 for use by its Faculty of Agriculture to support its Master of Science in Agricultural Systems degree program

Cornell University, Ithaca, New York $900,000 to support the training of an interdisciplinary cohort of fellows from eastern and southern Africa at the Ph D level in topics related to integrated nutrient management for Africa

Egerton University, Njoro, Kenya $4,400 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support the development of production-technology packages for wheat/chickpea-rotation cropping systems in Kenya

Egerton University, Njoro, Kenya $4,600 to support research on overcoming constraints to increased groundnut production

Egerton University, Njoro, Kenya $69,800 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support soil-science research on nitrogen-efficiency management in the vertisols in western Kenya.

Foundation-administered project: $24,909 for work on maize improvement breeding programs for Kenya and other African countries

Foundation-administered project: $75,000 for costs associated with managing the Foundation's program, Forum on Agricultural Resource Husbandry in Sub-Saharan Africa

Jomo Kenyatta University of Agriculture and Technology, Nairobi, Kenya $37,273 to provide training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support research on the use of natural chemical compounds from native plant species for control of pests and pathogens

Jomo Kenyatta University of Agriculture and Technology, Nairobi, Kenya $67,579 to provide training for African graduate students and to support biotechnological research for transformation of vitamin A-rich Kenyan sweet potato cultivars for resistance to weevils

Jomo Kenyatta University of Agriculture and Technology, Nairobi, Kenya $69,844 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support research for increasing pigeon pea (Cajanus cajan) production

Kenyatta University, Nairobi, Kenya $4,800 for use by its Department of Zoology to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support studies on the impact of agroforestry and intercropping on insect pests

Kenyatta University, Nairobi, Kenya $45,000 for research on the enhancement of soil productivity by use of low-input technologies on the smallholder farms of the central highlands of Kenya

Kenyatta University, Nairobi, Kenya $60,000 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support research on the control of root-knot nematodes in smallholder maize/bean intercropping systems in Kenya

Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda $64,794 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support research on disease-resistant banana mutants and banana micropropagation systems

Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda $75,031 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support research on the genetic diversity and improvement of banana cultivars in Uganda

Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda $85,000 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support studies on increasing potato production through selection of varieties resistant to late blight disease and through the judicious use of fungicides

Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda $65,000 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support research on soybean rust, the primary disease of soybeans in Uganda.

Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda $12,500 for use by its Faculty of Agriculture to further the development of its programs

Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda $5,000 to provide a preparation grant for the development of a project involving the rehabilitation of degraded rangelands in Uganda through the introduction of forage/fodder legumes as cover crops

Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda $64,533 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support integrated pest management in Uganda where cassava mosaic virus is pandemic

Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda $64,584 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and support research in overcoming constraints to increased sorghum production in the dry farming regions of Uganda

Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda $65,000 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support economic research on the adoption of integrated pest-management technologies developed for cowpea and groundnuts in eastern Uganda

Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda $65,000 to provide field training for African graduate students in agricultural sciences and to support research in identifying drought stress tolerant banana cultivars.

Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda $65,000 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support research on overcoming constraints to increased maize production

Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda $65,000 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support research on overcoming constraints to increased sweet potato production.

Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda $65,000 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support research on the use of intercrops in overcoming constraints to increased cassava production

Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda $65,000 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support economic research on factors affecting technology adoption for improved sorghum production in eastern Uganda

Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda $65,000 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support research to increase sesame production in the dry regions of Uganda

Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda $65,000 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support water balance research studies in the semi-arid areas of Lake Kyoga basin in Uganda

Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda $85,000 to provide field training for African graduate students in the use of biometrics and applied statistics for solving agricultural problems in Uganda

Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda $75,000 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to develop a decision support system for sustainable productivity of the banana-based cropping systems of the Lake Victoria basin

Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda $75,000 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support research on the economic evaluation of linkages between agricultural commercialization and the use of purchased inputs in Uganda

Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda $99,233 to provide training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support specifically the outreach activities associated with integrated pest management strategies for small-scale farmers in eastern Uganda

Moi University, Eldoret, Kenya $2,400 to provide field training for an African graduate student in the agricultural sciences and to support the Phosphate Rock Evaluation Project (PREP) to include research on market potential and farmer acceptance of the PREP-PAC as a soil fertility tool in western Kenya

Moi University, Eldoret, Kenya $4,800 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support the project, PREP—a strategy for replenishing productivity to low fertility patches in smallholders' fields of western Kenya

Moi University, Eldoret, Kenya $5,000 for use by its faculty of agriculture to further the development of its programs.

Moi University, Eldoret, Kenya $5,000 to provide a preparation grant for the development of a project involving all stakeholders in the incorporation of forest regeneration in the Shamba system of crop production

Moi University, Eldoret, Kenya $62,400 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support research on social factors affecting adoption of agroforestry systems technology in western Kenya

University of Malawi, Zomba, Malawi $171,000 for use by Bunda College of Agriculture toward the costs of the Fourth Forum Regional Meeting, held in Lilongwe, Malawi, Jul 10–14, 2000

University of Malawi, Zomba, Malawi $4,695 for use by Chancellor College as a preparation grant for research to enhance yam production that will provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences

University of Malawi, Zomba, Malawi $4,800 for use by Bunda College of Agriculture to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support the development of vascular puncture technique and identification of biologically and epidemiologically different maize streak virus isolates

University of Malawi, Zomba, Malawi $64,800 for use by Bunda College to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support research on the biology, ecology and control of Striga infestations in cereals

University of Malawi, Zomba, Malawi $65,174 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support research on agroforestry interventions in central Malawi

University of Malawi, Zomba, Malawi $68,339 for use by Bunda College of Agriculture to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support research in agricultural economics on the use of soybeans and pigeon peas for soil-fertility management in Malawi

University of Nairobi, Nairobi, Kenya $3,600 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support an assessment of the dissemination and adoption of improved fodder trees by women farmers in Embu District, Kenya

University of Nairobi, Nairobi, Kenya $4,000 for use by its Department of Soil Science to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support a project on field monitoring of seasonal surface soil loss and erosion-induced nutrient losses in a maize/legume-based cropping system in Kenya

University of Nairobi, Nairobi, Kenya $4,800 for use by its Faculty of Agriculture, Department of Soil Science, to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support research into soil-fertility problem solving in the Central Highlands of Kenya

University of Nairobi, Nairobi, Kenya $4,917 to provide a preparation grant for the development of a project on post-harvest technology for sweet potatoes using a participatory survey in two districts of Kenya

University of Nairobi, Nairobi, Kenya $62,210 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support integrated pest-management research on snapbeans, which are a major export crop and an income-earning commodity for many smallholder farmers

University of Nairobi, Nairobi, Kenya $64,751 to provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support studies on technology adoption and resource management in maize-production systems in two agroecological zones in Kenya

University of Nairobi, Nairobi, Kenya $65,469 to provide training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences and to support research on efficient resource use in low input maize/pigeon pea intercropping systems in Kenya

University of Nairobi, Nairobi, Kenya $69,640 to provide field training in agricultural sciences for African graduate students and to support research on the adoption of crop-production technologies and their impact on the food self-sufficiency of smallholder farmers in the Mumias Sugar Scheme in western Kenya

University of Zimbabwe, Harare, Zimbabwe $2,500 for use by its Faculty of Agriculture to further the development of its programs

University of Zimbabwe, Harare, Zimbabwe $3,400 for a preliminary study to develop a research project on preventing soil and water loss on badly degraded communal areas through the use of intercropping that will provide training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences

University of Zimbabwe, Harare, Zimbabwe $4,959 for a preliminary study to develop a research project on dryland paprika production in the smallholder farming sector of Zimbabwe that will provide field training for African graduate students in the agricultural sciences

University of Zimbabwe, Harare, Zimbabwe $73,500 to provide training for African graduate students and to support research on improved management of soybean-production technologies in smallholder maize-based cropping systems in Zimbabwe

University of Zimbabwe, Harare, Zimbabwe $8,000 to provide a stipend supplement for students supported by the Foundation's Forum on Agricultural Resource Husbandry program at the University

LOCAL UNIVERSITY CAPACITY BUILDING: ADVANCED TRAINING FELLOWSHIPS

Marjatta Eilitta, Gainesville, Florida $62,000 for a postdoctoral fellowship for work to compile and circulate information and implement strategies to strengthen information management and exchange on green-manure cover-crop systems, and to facilitate expansion of the use of Mucuna, a common green-manure cover-crop species in Africa and Latin America

Anju Mahendru, New Delhi, India $74,025 for a postdoctoral fellowship for advanced training in plant genetics at the Department of Crop and Soil Sciences, University of Georgia, Athens

Michigan State University, East Lansing, Michigan $20,000 toward the costs of dissertation research conducted by a Kenyan student on links between land-use patterns and gender-based differences in access to resources in the Mount Kilimanjaro area of Kajiado District, Kenya

Sujin Patarapuwadol, Nakhon Pathom, Thailand $144,270 for a fellowship for advanced training in plant biotechnology leading to the Ph.D. degree at the Plant Breeding Institute, University of Sydney, Australia.

LOCAL UNIVERSITY CAPACITY BUILDING: OTHER

Africa University, Mutare, Zimbabwe $30,000 to enable the University's Faculty of Agriculture to obtain the Essential Electronic Agricultural Library to improve access of faculty and students to up-to-date scientific information on all areas of agricultural science for teaching and research

African Crop Science Society, Rustenburg, South Africa $37,050 to support the next scientific meeting of the African Crop Science Society, based at Makerere University's Faculty of Agriculture, to be held in Nigeria, 2001

Agricultural College of the Humid Tropical Region, San José, Costa Rica $350,000 to strengthen collaborative relationships between the college and Makerere University in Uganda through exchange of students and faculty, and initiation of joint research projects in sustainable agriculture, and through innovations in learning, teaching and community development. ($200,000 from Regional Activities/Other Regions and $50,000 from African Regional Office/Human Capacity Building/African Universities-New York)

Cornell University, Albert R. Mann Library, Ithaca, New York $85,000 for use by its Albert R. Mann Library toward additional marketing and training support for the Essential Electronic Agricultural Library in Africa

Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda $10,000 for use by its Faculty of Agriculture to further the development of its programs

Ministry of Lands and Agriculture, Zimbabwe, Causeway, Zimbabwe $45,000 to provide access to the Essential Electronic Agricultural Library to the Agronomy Research Institute of the Department of Research and Specialist Services to improve the quality of its scientific research activities

Obafemi Awolowo University, Ife-Ife, Nigeria $45,000 to provide access to the Essential Electronic Agricultural Library with its Faculty of Agriculture to improve access of faculty and students to up-to-date scientific information on all areas of agricultural science for teaching and research

Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas $352,263 for research and Ph.D. training in maize breeding, with emphasis on tolerance to drought and low soil nitrogen, for two students from southern Africa

University of Zimbabwe, Harare, Zimbabwe $75,000 to provide a two-and-one-half year salary supplement for a professional chair in crops science at the University's Department of Crop Science of the Faculty of Agriculture, in order to strengthen the quality of teaching and scientific research

University of Zimbabwe, Harare, Zimbabwe $100,000 to strengthen the University's Department of Soil Science and Agricultural Engineering through a visiting research professorship

Harnessing the New Sciences

GLOBAL ALLIANCE FOR VACCINES

Foundation-administered project: $100,000 to undertake an inventory of public/private partnerships for vaccine research and development and to explore innovative ways to accelerate the development of vaccines and immunizations for use in developing countries

Foundation-administered project: $65,000 in support of the production, publication and distribution of a report on the pharmacoconomics of tuberculosis drug development

Foundation-administered project: $85,000 in support of the production, publication and distribution of the "Scientific Blueprint for TB Drug Development"

Foundation-administered project: $1,500,000 in support of the creation and launch of the Global Alliance for TB Drug Development

Global Alliance for TB Drug Development, New York, New York $4,500,000 for general support

Global Forum for Health Research, Geneva, Switzerland $500,000 for core funding of its activities in 2000 and specifically for the private partnerships project

International Vaccine Institute, Seoul, South Korea $50,000 toward the costs of a program of capacity building in developing countries for clinical evaluation of new vaccines

Medical Research Council, Cape Town, South Africa $99,825 for use by its Tuberculosis Drug Research Unit in Pretoria to support the establishment of a Coalition of Tuberculosis Research and Development Stakeholders in countries most affected by the disease

Medical Research Council, Cape Town, South Africa $36,575 for use by its Tuberculosis Drug Research Unit in Pretoria for a Latin America regional consultative meeting of tuberculosis research-and-development stakeholders to identify and prioritize local needs

William Alan Muraskin, New York, New York $23,000 to continue to research and write a book entitled, "A History of the Growth of the Children's Vaccine Program"

University of Chicago, Chicago, Illinois $63,000 for support of a research study on the biology of apicomplexan parasites in order to identify targets for new medicines

University of Maryland at Baltimore, Baltimore, Maryland $27,000 for use by its Center for Vaccine Development toward the cost of research related to the development of a safe, practical and effective oral vaccine against Shigella and E. coli and for surveillance studies of pediatric infections in Bamako, Mali

World Health Organization, Geneva, Switzerland $200,000 toward the costs of strengthening and maintaining a global movement for antituberculosis drug discovery and development

MEDICINES FOR MALARIA

Medicines for Malana Venture, Geneva, Switzerland $2,000,000 in support of public/private partnerships that foster the discovery and development of affordable new antimalarial drugs

Medicines for Malana Venture, Geneva, Switzerland $1,300,000 in support of the establishment of public/private partnerships to foster the discovery and development of affordable new antimalarial drugs

Strengthening Global Leadership

HEALTH EQUITY FRONTIERS

Catholic University of Chile, Santiago, Chile $185,400 for use by its Department of Public Health for a project to strengthen monitoring of health equity and health care in Chile, as part of the Equity Gauge initiative

Global Health Council, White River Junction, Vermont $350,000 for activities to promote redressing disparities in child health related to a U.N. General Assembly Special Session on Children in September 2001

Health Systems Trust, Durban, South Africa $527,700 to support a project working with national and provincial legislators to monitor health equity in South Africa, as part of the Equity Gauge initiative

International Centre for Diarrhoeal Disease Research, Bangladesh, Dhaka, Bangladesh $196,500 for use by its Centre for Health and Population Research for a collaborative project to develop a health-equity monitoring system in Bangladesh, as part of the Equity Gauge initiative

International Centre for Diarrhoeal Disease Research, Bangladesh, Dhaka, Bangladesh $100,000 for use by its Centre for Health and Population Research, for the third phase of a collaborative research study between Bangladesh Rural Advancement Committee (BRAC) and International Centre for Diarrhoeal Disease Research, Bangladesh (ICDDR, B) on the effects of poverty-alleviation programs on health

Mahidol University, Bangkok, Thailand $100,000 for use by its Faculty of Social Sciences and Humanities in support of a collaborative project to identify, assess and monitor equity in health and health care in Thailand at the national, regional and provincial levels, as part of the Equity Gauge initiative

Ministry of Health, China, Beijing, China $250,000 for use by its Center for Health Statistics and Information to establish the China Health Surveillance System, a household-based and equity-oriented health monitoring system, as part of the Equity Gauge initiative

Pan American Health Organization, Washington, D.C. $500,000 toward the costs of the capacity-building component of its health-equity initiative, and toward regional level activities to identify and redress gender inequities in health-sector reform policies

Training and Research Support Centre, Harare, Zimbabwe $98,250 to enhance public participation and accountability in the health-budget processes in Zimbabwe, as part of the Equity Gauge initiative

University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg, South Africa $25,000 for use by its Centre for Health Policy toward the costs of developing-country participation in the regional conference of the Southern African Network on Equity in Health (EQUINET), Sept 13-15, 2000

University of the Western Cape, Bellville, South Africa $250,000 to develop a practical strategy for equitable allocation of public health resources and interventions among 11 health districts in the Cape Town Metropole, South Africa, as part of the Equity Gauge initiative

GLOBAL HEALTH WATCH

Action on Smoking and Health Foundation, Bangkok, Thailand $300,020 for activities related to the development of the Southeast Asian Tobacco Control Alliance, a collaborative regional tobacco-control network

Action on Smoking and Health Foundation, Bangkok, Thailand $53,550 for a workshop to foster the skills and knowledge of key actors within the tobacco-control field in Southeast Asia

Adventist Development and Relief Agency International, Silver Spring, Maryland $198,692 for use by its Cambodia office for a community-based intervention project to increase the role of Buddhist monks in minimizing tobacco use within Cambodia

Consumers International, London, United Kingdom $30,000 for use by its Regional Office for Asia and the Pacific for a workshop on tobacco consumption and control, held in Durban, South Africa, Nov 13-17, 2000

Doctors Without Borders, New York, New York $75,000 toward the costs of a conference, organized jointly with Health Action International, on Improving Access to Essential Medicines in East Africa: Patents and Prices in a Global Economy, held in Nairobi, Kenya, June 2000

Essential Information, Washington, D.C. $75,000 to support a pilot project to initiate tobacco-control partnerships between U.S. and developing-country groups

Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts $35,000 for use by its School of Public Health in support of two seminars to explore ways in which information and communication technologies can best be used to advance health in developing countries

Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Maryland $356,064 for use by its Institute for Global Tobacco Control for capacity building and research/surveillance activities in Southeast Asia

Ministry of Health, Indonesia, Surabaya, Indonesia $61,328 for use by its Directorate General of Drug and Food Control for a workshop of the ASEAN countries on the World Trade Organization Trade-Related Aspects of International Property Rights, agreement and access to essential drugs

Panos Limited, London, United Kingdom $55,435 toward the cost of producing a briefing document to increase the awareness of the different factors affecting access to treatment for HIV and AIDS-related infections for dissemination and discussion at the 13th International AIDS Conference in Durban, South Africa

University of Illinois at Chicago, Chicago, Illinois $402,436 for use by its Health Research and Policy Centers to support the development of a research and technical-assistance program on the economics of tobacco use and control in Southeast Asia

World Health Organization, Geneva, Switzerland $205,500 for use by its Country Office in Cambodia to provide technical assistance to government and nongovernmental organizations involved in tobacco control in Cambodia

Reproductive Health

Anusandhan Trust, Mumbai, India: $425,000 to support India's National Abortion Assessment Study.

Family Planning Association of Kenya, Nairobi, Kenya: $239,430 to complete an intervention research project testing a new reproductive-health service delivery model for young people in the small city of Nyeri.

Foundation-administered projects: $65,000 for consultancies and meetings associated with implementing the reproductive-health services research program.

IPAS, Chapel Hill, North Carolina: $285,000 to conduct an assessment of three community-based adolescent sexual and reproductive-health projects in West Africa, and hold a regional workshop for these and other organizations conducting similar research in Africa.

IPAS, Chapel Hill, North Carolina: $2,230,110 to build program and research capacity among teams in sub-Saharan Africa that are conducting intervention research to design and test community-based approaches to expanding adolescent sexual- and reproductive-health information and services and promoting healthy behaviors.

Ministry of Health, Ghana, Accra, Ghana: $327,470 toward the cost of the demographic surveillance system of the Navrongo Health Research Centre.

Pacific Institute for Women's Health, Los Angeles, California: $691,790 to test community-based interventions to prevent unwanted pregnancies and unsafe abortion and its complications in Kenya, in collaboration with the Center for the Study of Adolescence in Nairobi.

Population Council, New York, New York: $227,950 to enable the Population Council's staff in Bangkok to continue to assist local researchers and UNICEF's Myanmar office with conducting research studies, training and technical assistance on critical issues in reproductive health and HIV/AIDS in Myanmar.

Population Council, New York, New York: $348,840 to enable its Nairobi regional office to continue to provide technical assistance to the Family Planning Association of Kenya and the Zimbabwe National Family Planning Council in testing and evaluating new models of reproductive-health programs for adolescents.

Population Council, New York, New York: $399,460 for a study to be conducted in collaboration with the Self-Employed Women's Association, Gujarat, India, to test a set of livelihood and savings program activities to improve the livelihoods of adolescent girls in India and the impact of such activities on decision making related to marriage and childbearing.

Reproductive Health Matters, London, United Kingdom: $50,000 toward the costs of publishing and distributing, free of charge, its journal and other printed materials in sub-Saharan Africa and South Asia.

Research, Action and Information Network for the Bodily Integrity of Women, New York, New York: $100,000 for its African Partnership for Sexual and Reproductive Health and Rights of Women.

Sakhi for South Asian Women, New York, New York: $454,940 for a project in collaboration with a group of women's and development organizations in India, to complete and disseminate a review of sexual- and reproductive-health research conducted in India over the past 10 years; and to conduct with several community-based organizations in India, case studies and research to assess the links between asset-building programs for women and women's reproductive health.

Save the Children Fund (U.K.), London, United Kingdom: $82,870 for creating and strengthening the psychological and social resources of adolescents in urban Mali, in order to facilitate their acquisition and application of sexual-health information.

Society for Education, Action and Research in Community Health, India: $50,000 for the writing, publication and dissemination of research papers on reproductive and child health and institutional capacity building.

Thomas Jefferson University, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania: $498,250 to further develop the capacity of the Global Network for Perinatal and Reproductive Health, and to support a multicenter study of perinatal infections.

University of Ibadan, Ibadan, Nigeria: $170,000 for a study to develop and evaluate reproductive-health education and service programs for out-of-school youth in rural and urban sites in Oyo State, Nigeria.

University of Montreal, Montreal, Canada: $14,420 for a study to be conducted in collaboration with the University of Yaoundé on adolescent reproductive health and sexuality in Cameroon.

University of Montreal, Montreal, Canada $450,000 for intervention research to be conducted in collaboration with the University of Yaoundé, to test several approaches to improving the sexual and reproductive health and health-seeking behaviors of adolescents in Cameroon

University of Ouagadougou, Ouagadougou, Burkina Faso $55,190 for a community-based study to document and understand the norms and practices related to induced abortion and prevention of unwanted pregnancies in a rural area of Bazega Province

Uzima Foundation, Nairobi, Kenya $35,000 for a study on the impact of its AIDS awareness activities on the sexual behavior of youth in Kenya

Women's Health and Action Research Centre, Benin City, Nigeria $182,970 to conduct documentation and intervention research on the sexual and reproductive health of out-of-school adolescents in Nigeria

Zimbabwe National Family Planning Council, Harare, Zimbabwe $302,110 to complete an intervention research project aiming to identify appropriate, effective and replicable models of reproductive-health services for youth in Zimbabwe

Resourcing Public Health

PUBLIC HEALTH SCHOOLS WITHOUT WALLS

Carter Center, Atlanta, Georgia $60,000 in support of three in-country public health-training and curriculum-development workshops in Ethiopia

Chulalongkorn University, Bangkok, Thailand $6,321 for use by its College of Public Health for reimbursement of the local costs associated with hosting the annual meeting in February 1999 of the Public Health Schools Without Walls Network in Bangkok, Thailand

Foundation-administered project: $160,000 for the costs associated with a comprehensive participatory evaluation of the Public Health Schools Without Walls (PHSWOW) program

Foundation-administered project: $90,000 supplemental funding for the comprehensive evaluation of the PHSWOW program to enable the evaluators to further network development and to facilitate internal evaluations of the programs in Zimbabwe, Uganda, Ghana and Vietnam

Sree Chitra Tirunal Institute for Medical Sciences and Technology, Trivandrum, India $130,029 for use by its Achutha Menon Centre for Health Science Studies to support the activities of the working group established to collect and analyze information to define the future form and membership of the Public Health School Without Walls network in preparation for the next annual meeting

INFORMATION/SURVEILLANCE

Africa Midwives Research Network, Dar es Salaam, Tanzania $200,000 as an International Health Research Award for support of a collaborative partnership to strengthen research skills and opportunities among midwives in Africa

Ateneo de Manila University, Manila, Philippines $93,900 for use by its Institute of Philippine Culture for activities related to fostering people-centered public health strategies, and forging networks among several Asian countries to share information about these efforts

Brazilian Institute for Consumer Protection, São Paulo, Brazil $200,000 as an International Health Research Award to support a collaborative partnership to improve health in Brazil and Latin America by strengthening consumer action through research and knowledge generation

Chulalongkorn University, Bangkok, Thailand $98,800 for use by its College of Public Health for activities related to knowledge management and capacity development in Southeast Asia

Consumers International, London, United Kingdom $350,000 for use by its Regional Office for Asia and the Pacific toward the costs of the People's Health Assembly conference held in Dhaka, Bangladesh, December 2000

Council on Health Research for Development, Geneva, Switzerland $150,000 supplemental funding for an international conference in Bangkok, Thailand, to devise a new agenda for health research for development

Curatio International Foundation, Tbilisi, Republic of Georgia $200,000 as an International Health Research Award to support a collaborative partnership to strengthen the links between research and policies to make the health-care system in the Republic of Georgia more responsive to the needs of its population

Global Health Council, White River Junction, Vermont $248,950 to support a three-year national education and outreach program in the United States on infectious diseases of global importance

Health Systems Research Institute, Nondaburi, Thailand $200,000 as an International Health Research Award to support a collaborative partnership to strengthen the capacity of health-research institutions in the context of health-systems reform in Thailand

INCLEN Trust International, Manila, Philippines $2,000,000 for general support

Institute of Policy Studies of Sri Lanka, Colombo, Sri Lanka $200,000 as an International Health Research Award to support a collaborative partnership to strengthen health-systems reform in the Asia-Pacific region within the National Health Accounts framework

Medical Research Council, Cape Town, South Africa $200,000 as an International Health Research Award for use by its Women's Health Research Unit in Pretoria to support a collaborative partnership to create a South African gender-based violence and health initiative

Ministry of Health, Cambodia, Phnom Penh, Cambodia $84,918 for use by its Communicable Disease Control Department for continued efforts to strengthen disease surveillance through capacity building and communications networking

Ministry of Health, Kenya, Nairobi, Kenya $98,300 in support of activities to strengthen the integrated disease surveillance system in Kenya, as part of the East African Integrated Disease Surveillance Network

Ministry of Health, Uganda, Kampala, Uganda $79,800 in support of a project to strengthen the integrated disease surveillance system in Uganda, as part of the East African Integrated Disease Surveillance Network

Ministry of Public Health, Thailand, Nonthaburi, Thailand $10,460 for use by its Field Epidemiology Training Program toward the costs of a meeting related to the start-up of a Mekong Basin Disease Surveillance network

Ministry of Public Health, Thailand, Nonthaburi, Thailand $400,000 for use by its Field Epidemiology Training Program for activities related to the maintenance and further development of the Mekong Basin Disease Surveillance network

National Institute for Medical Research, Dar es Salaam, Tanzania $200,000 as an International Health Research Award to support a collaborative partnership to strengthen the Tanzania National Health Research Forum and for health-research activities

National Institute for Medical Research, Dar es Salaam, Tanzania $141,841 in support of its activities as the country focal point for Tanzania and to serve as the regional coordinating center for the East African Integrated Disease Surveillance Network

National Institute of Public Health, Mexico, Cuernavaca, Morelos, Mexico $200,000 in support of a collaborative partnership to improve the links between reproductive-health and health-sector reforms in Latin America and the Caribbean

Nepal Health Research Council, Kathmandu, Nepal $200,000 as an International Health Research Award for a collaborative partnership in support of activities to strengthen the health-research network in Nepal

Southeast Asian Ministers of Education Organization, Bangkok, Thailand $200,000 for use by its Regional Tropical Medicine and Public Health Network for activities related to research-capacity development for provincial/district health officers in the Mekong region

Tata Institute of Social Sciences, Mumbai, India $200,000 in support of a collaborative partnership to strengthen health research among nongovernmental organizations in India

World Health Organization, Geneva, Switzerland $400,000 to work with regional representatives of developing-country institutions to develop an administration and selection process for the Millennium Health Research Awards, presented at an international meeting entitled, International Conference on Health Research for Development, in October 2000

Launching a Second Contraceptive Revolution

Action Canada for Population and Development, Ottawa, Canada $96,270 for a public-education program about international population and development issues, and the dissemination of research results on these topics

Aaron Diamond AIDS Research Center, New York, New York $300,000 for a study of inhibitors of HIV-1 envelope and cellular coreceptors, as part of a network geared toward the development of vaginal microbicides

All India Institute of Medical Sciences, New Delhi, India $299,940 for studies in receptive stage gene expression in the rhesus monkey endometrium and the mode of action of antiangiogenic agents during receptivity and implantation, as part of an implantation research network brought together by the World Health Organization

All India Institute of Medical Sciences, New Delhi, India $100,000 to continue studies in receptive stage gene expression in the rhesus monkey endometrium and the mode of action of antiangiogenic agents during receptivity and implantation, as part of an implantation research network brought together by the World Health Organization

Blaise Pascal University, Clermont-Ferrand Cedex, France $91,110 for a study of GPX5 and GPX3 in the mammalian epididymis as potential tools toward the modulation of the epididymal environment and the integrity of spermatozoa

Brigham and Women's Hospital, Boston, Massachusetts $299,980 for a study of vaginal tract mucosal-immune defense and HIV infection, as part of a network geared toward the development of vaginal microbicides

Chinese Academy of Sciences, Beijing, China $100,000 for use by its State Key Laboratory of Reproductive Biology to study the effects of antiangiogenic factors on the corpus luteum and implantation in primates as part of an implantation-research network brought together by the World Health Organization

Concept Foundation, Bangkok, Thailand $242,810 to complete a collaborative research and development project with the World Health Organization and Chinese institutions concerning the post-ovulatory use of mifepristone as a means of reducing unwanted pregnancies and the recourse to abortion.

Family Health International, Research Triangle Park, North Carolina $29,290 for a study of the introduction and use of emergency contraception in Venezuela

The Board of Trustees
The Rockefeller Foundation

We have audited the accompanying statements of financial position of The Rockefeller Foundation as of December 31, 2000 and 1999, and the related statements of activities and cash flows for the years then ended. These financial statements are the responsibility of The Rockefeller Foundation's management. Our responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on our audits.

We conducted our audits in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in the United States. Those standards require that we plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements are free of material misstatement. An audit includes examining, on a test basis, evidence supporting the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. An audit also includes assessing the accounting principles used and significant estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall financial statement presentation. We believe that our audits provide a reasonable basis for our opinion.

In our opinion, the financial statements referred to above present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of The Rockefeller Foundation at December 31, 2000 and 1999, and the changes in its net assets and its cash flows for the years then ended in conformity with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States.

NOTES TO FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

1. INVESTMENTS

The Foundation's significant investments are carried at fair value or contractual values which approximate fair value. Fair value is the amount at which a financial instrument could be exchanged in a current transaction between willing parties, other than in a forced sale or liquidation. The fair values of financial instruments are estimates based upon market conditions and perceived risks as of the statement of financial position date and require varying degrees of management judgment. Quoted market prices, when available, are used as the measure of fair value. In cases where quoted market prices are not available, fair values are based on appraisals, quotations of similarly traded instruments, pricing models or other estimates.

Investing activities are reported on a trade date basis. Realized gains and losses are calculated based on the specific identification method for both financial statement and tax return purposes.

The Foundation's investment portfolio consists of the following:

As of December 31, 2000, under the terms of various venture capital, real estate limited partnership and other agreements, the Foundation has commitments to contribute approximately $231.5 million in additional capital over the next 10 years.

2. DERIVATIVE FINANCIAL INSTRUMENTS

Derivatives are financial instruments whose value is based upon an underlying asset (e.g., treasury bond), index (e.g., S&P 500) or reference rate (e.g., LIBOR). Over-the-counter ("OTC") derivative products are privately negotiated contractual agreements that can be tailored to meet individual client needs and include futures, forwards and options. Exchange-traded derivative products are standardized contracts transacted through regulated exchanges and include futures and certain options contracts listed on an exchange. Derivatives are utilized extensively as highly effective tools that enable users to adjust risk profiles, such as interest rate, currency or other market risks. Additionally, derivatives provide users with access to market risk management tools, which are often unavailable in traditional cash instruments.

As a result of its investing strategies, the Foundation is a party to various derivative financial instruments. Derivatives are used by the Foundation primarily to maintain asset mix or to hedge a portion of currency or interest rate exposure.

The Foundation invests in international securities and therefore is exposed to the effects of foreign exchange rate fluctuations predominantly in Japanese yen, Swiss francs, Australian dollars, British pounds, Swedish krona and euros. Foreign currency options and forward contracts may be used to hedge a portion of this currency risk. The Foundation also employs derivatives to maintain a desired asset mix. For example, S&P 500 index futures contracts are used in combination with cash invested in money market instruments to replicate an investment in an S&P 500 stock portfolio. This combination yields the same return, while often providing for savings on transaction costs.

The Foundation's fixed income managers set a target for the duration of their portfolios and use duration analysis to estimate the degree of the portfolio's sensitivity to interest rate changes. When the duration of a particular portfolio of securities is different from their target, Eurodollar or Treasury note futures or options may be used to adjust the portfolio's duration.

Total margin requirements on deposit for futures contracts were $5.6 million at December 31, 2000 ($13 million at December 31, 1999).

The underlying contract amounts ("Notional Values") and fair values of the Foundation's derivative financial instruments at December 31, 2000 and 1999, are summarized below; all are held for other than trading purposes.

The Foundation records its derivative activities on a mark-to-market or fair value basis. Assets and liabilities included in the table below represent the derivative contracts purchased and sold by the Foundation. The fair value of such positions represents the net unrealized gains and losses and, consequently, the net receivables and payables at December 31, 2000 and 1999. instruments is generally determined by either quoted market prices or third-party pricing models. Pricing models utilize a series of market inputs to determine the present value of future cash flows, with adjustments, as required, for credit risk, liquidity risk and ongoing costs.

Off-balance sheet financial instruments involve elements of market risk and credit risk. Market risk represents potential loss from the decrease in the value of off-balance sheet financial instruments. Credit risk represents potential loss from possible nonperformance by obligors and counterparties on the terms of their contracts.

At December 31, 2000, there was approximately $26.9 million related to OTC contracts and approximately $1.4 million related to exchange-traded contracts. Counterparties to the Foundation's OTC derivative products are high credit quality institutions, which are primarily banks, securities firms and investment companies. Management does not anticipate that losses, if any, resulting from credit or market risk, would materially affect the Foundation's financial position.

The Foundation's two custodians maintain securities lending programs on behalf of the Foundation, and maintain collateral at all times in excess of the value of the securities on loan. Investment of this collateral is in accordance with specified guidelines. Interest earned on these transactions is included with other investment income in the statements of activities. The market value of securities on loan at December 31, 2000 and 1999, was approximately $288.8 million and $195 million, respectively.

3. PROPERTY

Expenditures for capital items currently in use are included in the property account and depreciated on a straight-line basis over the lives of the respective assets. At December 31, 2000 and 1999, the property account included the following:

	2000	1999
(In Thousands)
Condominium interest in 420 Fifth Avenue	$ 16,555	$ 16,555

	33,402	30,304
Less accumulated depreciation and amortization	6,142	4,875
Property—net	$ 27,260	$ 25,429

4. PENSIONS AND OTHER POST-RETIREMENT BENEFITS

The Foundation maintains a defined benefit pension plan (the "Plan") for regular salaried employees who were at least 21 years old and have completed one year of service or had attained the age of 40 prior to July 1, 2000. As of July 1, 2000, the Plan was closed to new employees and also to those employees hired prior to July 1, 2000 who did not meet the eligibility requirements. The Plan provides retirement benefits based on years of service and final average pay, with benefits after retirement subject to increase under a cost-of-living augmentation formula. The Foundation makes annual contributions to the Plan, as needed, based on actuarial calculations, in amounts sufficient to meet the minimum funding requirements pursuant to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974. Plan assets are invested in a diversified portfolio of equities and fixed income securities.

In 2000, the Foundation enhanced its 401(k) plan to create the Retirement Savings Plan (formerly, the Trusteed Savings Plan). Foundation contributions are now made to equal 13 percent of compensation plus a dollar-for-dollar match of up to an additional 2 percent of compensation contributed on a pre-tax basis by employees up to the compensation cap of $170,000. Current members of the Plan had the option of remaining in the combined retirement plan consisting of the defined benefit pension plan and the former 401(k) Trusteed Savings Plan or moving to the new Retirement Savings Plan. Employees can make additional unmatched pre-tax contributions which, when combined with employee contributions that are matched, cannot exceed the maximum pre-tax contribution limit of $10,500.

All contributions are credited to the participants' accounts. The Foundation's contributions to the plans were $776,000 in 2000 and $550,000 in 1999.

The Foundation provides certain health care and life insurance benefits ("Other Benefits") for retired employees. Employees are eligible for these benefits when they meet the criteria for retirement under the Foundation's pension plan. The plans are noncontributory and there are no cost sharing features. The Foundation accrues the expected cost of providing post-retirement benefits over the years that employees render service and pays the cost of retiree health care benefits with excess pension plan assets under the provisions of Section 401(h) of the Internal Revenue Code.

5. BONDS PAYABLE

During fiscal 1993, the Foundation issued $20,445,000 in tax-exempt term bonds and $9,815,000 in tax-exempt serial bonds to fund the acquisition, construction and furnishing of a new office facility (the "Facility"). The bond proceeds and related investment income earned were held by a trustee (the "Trustee") and have been disbursed at the direction of the Foundation to fund allowable Facility-related costs.

The bonds are rated Aaa by Moody's and AAA by Standard & Poor's and are backed by the general assets of the Foundation. In addition, the bonds are secured by the Foundation's ownership interest in the Facility, a leasehold interest in the Facility, insurance proceeds with respect to the Facility and certain amounts held by the Trustee. The nominal interest rates on the serial bonds range from 4.5 percent to 5.1 percent. The nominal interest rates attributable to the term bonds are 5.3 percent and 5.4 percent.

The serial bonds mature in various amounts, ranging from $635,000 to $880,000 per year, through 2008. The term bonds are due in 2013 ($5,140,000) and 2023 ($15,305,000). Bond maturities are as follows (in thousands):

Fiscal year ending December 31:
2001	$ 635
2002	665
2003	695
2004	725
2005	760
Thereafter	22,965
	$ 26,445

6. APPROPRIATIONS AND EXPENDITURES

Appropriations by the trustees are considered to be obligations when grants are approved (awarded) for specific grantees; appropriations not released for specific grantees and the appropriation for the budget for the next year are considered as board-designated net assets. The majority of approved grants are scheduled for payment within one year. Administrative costs, including investment expenses and excise taxes, account for approximately 12 percent (18 percent in 1999) of the Foundation's total expenses and are charged to operations when incurred.

Appropriations and expenditures for the year are summarized as follows:

	Appropriated for Specific Grantees/Purposes	Appropriated for Allocation and Next Year's Budget	Total Appropriated
		(in Thousands)
Balance, January 1, 2000	$ 65,084	$ 260,701	$ 325,785

Balance, December 31, 2000	$ 97,405	$ 227,043	$ 324,448

7. FEDERAL EXCISE TAX

The Foundation is a philanthropic organization chartered in 1913 "to promote the well-being of mankind throughout the world." The Foundation qualifies as a tax-exempt organization under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code and, accordingly, is not subject to Federal income tax. Because the Foundation is classified as a private foundation, it is subject to a Federal excise tax of 1 percent or 2 percent on investment income (its principal source of revenue) less investment expenses, and on net realized taxable gains on securities transactions. In accordance with Section 4940(e) of the Internal Revenue Code, for the years ended December 31, 2000 and 1999, the Foundation met the specified distribution requirements and, therefore, was subject to a Federal excise tax of 1 percent. Additionally, the Foundation's investments in certain private equity and real estate partnerships give rise to unrelated business income tax liabilities. Such tax liabilities for 2000 and 1999 are not significant to the accompanying financial statements.

Deferred Federal excise tax arises from temporary differences between financial and tax reporting related to investment income and the difference between the cost basis and market value of marketable securities.

8. USE OF ESTIMATES

The preparation of financial statements in conformity with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States requires management to make estimates and assumptions that affect the amounts reported in the financial statements and accompanying notes. Management believes that the estimates utilized in preparing its financial statements are reasonable and prudent. Actual results could differ from those estimates.

CONTACTING THE FOUNDATION ABOUT GRANTS

The Rockefeller Foundation works to enrich and sustain the lives and livelihoods of the poor and excluded throughout the world.

The Foundation has identified four themes, or subject areas of work—Creativity & Culture, Food Security, Health Equity, and Working Communities. A cross-theme of Global Inclusion supports, promotes and supplements the work of the four themes. In addition, the Foundation funds a number of programs that are new or exploratory in nature. Foundation programming is managed from the Foundation's New York City headquarters, and from regional offices in Bangkok, Thailand; Nairobi, Kenya; Harare, Zimbabwe; Mexico City; and San Francisco. Program goals are included in the strategy section beginning on page 4 of this report.

The Foundation is a proactive grantmaker—that is, the officers and staff seek out opportunities that will advance the Foundation's long-term goals, rather than reacting to unsolicited proposals. Foundation officers receive more than 12,000 proposals each year, 75 percent of which cannot be considered because their purposes fall outside the Foundation's program guidelines.

Organizations interested in Foundation grantmaking should send a letter of inquiry addressed to the director of the subject area of interest, Rockefeller Foundation, 420 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10018, or, inquiries can be sent online as follows: Creativity & Culture—creativity@rockfound.org, Food Security—food@rockfound.org, Health Equity—health@rockfound.org, Working Communities—work@rockfound.org, or Global Inclusion—global@rockfound.org. An inquiry should briefly describe the project and its purpose (no attachments, please).

It is important to note that, as a matter of policy, the Foundation does not give or lend money for personal aid to individuals, support attempts to influence legislation, or, except in rare cases, provide general institutional support, fund endowments or contribute to building and operating funds.

PROGRAM OBJECTIVES (in alphabetical order)

THEME: CREATIVITY & CULTURE

Resilient and Creative Communities: Preserving and renewing cultural heritages to enhance the well-being of societies and equip the poor and excluded to relate to, and gain benefits from, the new global community.

Grantmaking is done through Recovering and Reinventing Cultures Through Museums, a competitive program supporting exhibitions that broaden the definition of American art and chart the cultural contributions of non-Western populations. Support is also given to ongoing research initiatives on the cultural indicators of social health.

The PACT program (Partnerships Affirming Community Transformation)—community partnerships that use the arts and humanities to bridge difference and effect social change, is under review.

Explorations are under way to preserve and strengthen threatened traditional art forms in developing countries; to help communities recover and interpret cultural materials, such as literary or religious texts and oral histories; and to examine the role that memory, history and imagination play in helping communities withstand and adapt to the stresses of poverty, exclusion and violence. These program explorations are not open to direct application.

Knowledge and Freedom in the Public Sphere: Artists and humanists, through social critique, play a key role in creating democratic, inclusive civil societies. Translating religious ideas into the language of public discourse and brokering conversations between religious communities can help defuse tensions that deeply touch people's lives.

Grantmaking is done through initiatives that fortify civil society through cultural institutions in Africa and the Muslim world, and mobilize the assets of religions to build resilient communities. Support for scholarship and research networks is provided through a competitive program of Resident Humanities Fellowships hosted by humanities centers in North and South America. Additional ways of bringing humanities perspectives to bear on the Foundation's new program themes are under exploration.

Creativity and Innovation in a Global Age: The voices and visions of artists and humanists can help us envision reality and clarify our understanding
